The Official Catholic Directory® Anno Domini 2015

With CCS, fundraising is a stewardship journey.

For more than six decades, CCS has been the leading consulting firm in Catholic fundraising and stewardship, helping to create fiscally strong, vibrant communities of faith. Our initiatives are rooted in the principles of Catholic stewardship. CCS-led campaigns provide practical, tailored plans to help build fiscally strong parishes and arch/dioceses that are able to realize their full potential, and in turn, enable the Church to fulfill its mission to serve God's people.

Helping Catholic institutions fulfill their missions is our passion.

FOREWORD

It is with great pleasure that we present the 2015 Edition of The Official Catholic Directory®. In addition to our comprehensive coverage of the institutions and clergy associated with the Catholic Church in the U.S., this volume features exclusive articles of interest to the Church. One introduces us to the Church's Dynamic Catholics, those most engaged in the volunteer activities and financial support of their parishes and how they transform and revitalize their church communities. Another feature outlines the history of the Pope's personal library, the Vatican Apostolic Library, and the treasures housed in its vast collection. Also included is an analysis of parish staffing models and how they impact a pastor's most valuable resource – his time; a discussion highlighting the components of a smart, healthy, and holy Church; a CARA report on the population trends affecting women religious; and our annual Year in Review.

Along with Volume One, we have included The Official Catholic Directory, Part II in your subscription. Produced in the fall, the supplement contains updates and new listings not present in the main volume, along with the archdioceses and dioceses of the world reprinted with permission from the Vatican.

We strive to provide a thorough and accurate portrait of the Catholic Church in America and to continually improve this unique and valuable reference tool. This directory owes a debt of gratitude to the ecclesiastical authorities and diocesan officials who helped make The Official Catholic Directory® possible. We thank them for their cooperation and invaluable assistance.

Sincerely,

The Seal of P.J. Kenedy & Sons
The Official Catholic Directory

Significance

The shield is the central part of a heraldic device, which is more commonly known as a coat of arms. If that shield is enclosed within a body of text, or other type of surrounding configuration, the device becomes known as a seal, yet it is the shield portion of the design that is the most important, and that which is described technically as the blazon. As the design is examined, it must be remembered that by heraldic tradition the design is described (blazoned) as if being done by the bearer with the shield being worn on the arm. Therefore, the terms dexter and sinister will be reversed as the design is viewed from the front.

The shield of the seal for The Official Catholic Directory has been designed to reflect the character and heritage of this publication of P.J. Kenedy & Sons.

The shield is in two major portions. The right half (sinister impalement) is composed of the blue shield on which are seen a silver tree, two candles (in silver or white) in their candleholders (of gold or yellow) and an open book, edged in gold and with a red bookmark. These symbols have been used over the years as the sign of the P.J. Kenedy & Sons publishing organization. These are the traditional symbols of knowledge and learning, so appropriate to a publisher.

The other side of the shield (the dexter impalement) is composed of a silver (white) field on which is seen a red cross, throughout, and a gold eagle. These symbols, combined with the field of the sinister impalement, are represented in the color of the flag of the United States of America and the eagle, the symbol of the United States. The cross represents Christianity and all of this combines to signify that The Official Catholic Directory annually reports on the Catholic Church in the United States.

The shield is surrounded by a laurel wreath of excellence and is enclosed within the legend that states the name of the company, the name of the publication and date (1817) of its founding.

The KNIGHTS of COLUMBUS

A Catholic fraternal organization founded in 1882, the Knights of Columbus has more than 1.8 million members in the Americas, Europe and Asia. For 133 years it has provided programs to strengthen the faith and the financial security of its members and their families. Continuing to uphold its first principle of charity, the Knights of Columbus donated more than $170 million and 70.5 million hours of volunteer service to charitable causes in 2013. Cumulative gifts during the past decade total nearly $1.515 billion and more than 682 million hours to charity.

Saving a legacy

A century-and-a-half connects the artists whose stained glass work graces the narthex, aisles and sanctuary of Chapel of Christ the Good Shepherd, Immaculate Conception Seminary in South Orange, NJ.

Originally manufactured in the painterly Munich style by the Tyrolese Glass Art Studio of Innsbruck, Austria, the condition of the windows was deplorable when rescued from Queen of Angels, a redundant church in Newark, NJ. Time and neglect had taken their toll. Many might have considered the panels beyond recovery, but client Msgr. Joseph R. Reilly, Rector / Dean, thought otherwise.

Following half-a-year of patience plus exacting conservation methods, Rambusch revealed the windows' beauty and superb quality, presenting Msgr. Reilly with three original adaptive-use designs. After an engaging round of discussion, he decided on the final groupings and their placement.

Next, using the finest mouth-blown German glass as a ground for the antique scenes, our modern-day glass artists continued the work of their forebears. They completed the ensemble, employing the enduring, time-honored techniques of etching, tracing, matting and shading.

Inspired artists, talented craftspeople and above all, an educated client combined skill, taste and expertise to bridge a century-and-a-half of expression in stained glass.

"Just so, your light must shine before others, that they may see your good deeds and glorify your heavenly Father."
(Matt. 5:16)

For more than 33 years, Food For The Poor's faith-filled donors have helped to transform the lives of children like Abner, pictured here. Food For The Poor reaches out to impoverished families and communities in 17 countries throughout the Caribbean and Latin America in the spirit of God's mercy and goodness.

At Food For The Poor, we follow Christ's Gospel mandate to care for our poorest brothers and sisters. Through our dedicated partners, such as in-country missionaries, clergy, churches, like-minded organizations and compassionate individuals, we are able to provide food, housing, fresh water, healthcare, education, micro-enterprise projects and emergency relief to those in dire need. Through all of us working together in collective Christian charity, we express God's love and give new hope to the destitute.

According to The Chronicle of Philanthropy, Food For The Poor is the largest international relief organization in the United States. Since 1982, we have supplied more than $11 billion worth of aid and built more than 100,000 housing units for poor families. Committed to being good stewards of every gift we receive, our fundraising and other administrative costs comprise less than 5% of our expenses. More than 95% of all donations go directly to programs that help the poor.

His Eminence Óscar Andrés Cardinal Rodríguez Maradiaga, SDB, is the President of Caritas International, Coordinator of Pope Francis' Council of Cardinals, and a member of Food For The Poor's Board of Directors. Here he is pictured with Robin Mahfood, President/CEO of Food For The Poor, at the charity's office in Coconut Creek, Florida.

We seek to reflect Christ's unconditional love in our work, which links the church of the First World with the church of the Third World by serving the materially poor and the poor in spirit. We use Matthew 25:40 as our guideline:

"As often as you did it to one of the least of My brothers and sisters, you did it to Me."

U.S.ARMY

A SOLDIER OF FAITH

CAPT. LUKASZ WILLENBERG
U.S. ARMY CHAPLAIN

Captain Lukasz Willenberg, a Catholic chaplain with the U.S. Army's 10th Mountain Division, knew from a young age that he had been called to a life of service in the Church. But it was only recently that he felt called to serve within the U.S. Army. While it was a change for him, he still values the new way he's exercising his calling by serving Soldiers.

"I feel blessed and possess this overwhelming peace and joy, which reassures me that I am doing what God wants me to."

FILLING A GREAT NEED

In recent years the civilian priestly ministry has been facing a human resource shortage, which directly impacts the ministry in the Army. With fewer qualified clergy to recruit, there are fewer Catholic priests to help serve the needs of Soldiers. It was this shortage that initially inspired Father Willenberg to consider the Army.

"In 2010, I met [Maj.] Father Paul A. Halladay. He was the one who actually told me about working with the Soldiers and about the great need [for] chaplains in general, but especially Catholic priests. I always had a desire to serve where I am needed the most. After learning about [the] shortage, I took it as a sign as to where I should be."

SERVING THOSE WHO SERVE

Although Father Willenberg has been serving as an Army chaplain for a short time, he has already distinguished himself by earning the Bronze Star, the third-highest recognition in the Army, for his contributions to his unit during his deployment in Afghanistan. But for Father Willenberg, the most important thing is the work he does with other Soldiers. One program that helps him make a positive impact is Strong Bonds, where Father Willenberg plans workshops for Soldiers, couples, and military families off base. During the workshops, he helps Soldiers tackle difficult life questions, strengthen their faith, reintegrate into civilian life, and more.

"[Strong Bonds is] a wonderful resource for us as chaplains. ... I love doing it. I have a chance to get to know the Soldiers, get to know the families during the workshops. And ... going outside of post, going out to eat together – that's where you build relationships with them."

Outside of workshops, he has organized several events for Soldiers in his unit and congregation. In fact, one of his greatest logistical undertakings was creating and organizing an officially sanctioned version of the Boston Marathon run in Afghanistan. But above all, he finds his best work is done by being a part of Soldiers' lives.

"The ministry of presence, that's such a powerful tool. When you just spend time with Soldiers, doing physical training, going on road marches, when you eat with them at the dining facility ... you experience what they experience and automatically you are one of them. That's where the ministry happens. The Soldiers know that they can trust you, and that you are there for them. You build those relationships so then when they need you as a chaplain, they know where to go. [They] know that I'll be there for them. That's what I'm trying to do. That's my ministry. My battalion commander, (Lt. Col.) Brian C. North, told me once to 'just take care of my Soldiers.' That's what I try to do every day."

THE JOYS OF SERVICE

While focusing on being a part of the Soldiers' everyday lives, Father Willenberg cherishes the bonds he's made with his fellow servicemen and women.

"You keep giving of yourself, but at the same time the ministry is so rewarding. [It's in] those small things. Those small words of appreciation from the Soldiers mean much more to me than the formal recognition. From time to time, [a Soldier] says, 'Thank you for being there for me. Thank you for your encouraging words.' It's the biggest reward that you can get."

GUIDANCE IN GIVING, INC.

Full Service Stewardship, Development & Campaign Consultants

Fundraising is not just about raising money, it is about being stewards of the faith.

As a full-service Catholic organization involved solely with developing programs for parishes, dioceses and schools, we have the experience and expertise to design a successful Stewardship-based capital campaign for your parish.

Guidance In Giving, Inc. offers its parish clients full-service campaign direction that is customized to the needs of each community. The firm understands that today's pastor faces many challenges. The challenges involve not only meeting the spiritual needs of his parishioners, but also the temporal needs of his parish. By designing and implementing an organized campaign plan, Guidance In Giving, Inc. aims to effectively use the time of pastors, parish staff and lay leadership to achieve the maximum financial potential. Our full-time, on-site service alleviates the worry that is sometimes associated with a fundraising campaign and allows parish leadership to concentrate on its most important mission, that of serving its people.

In a successful Stewardship-based capital campaign, every Catholic family is challenged to give prayerfully and proportionately to the best of their financial ability over a period of three to five years. Each and every gift is vitally important; therefore, a key element of the campaign is to provide everyone the opportunity to make a decision after they have learned about the parish's needs. The most effective manner of educating each parish family and raising the maximum amount of funds is through personal education and solicitation. These personal solicitations can be done via visitation as well as small and large group receptions. These are the most commonly employed and most successful methods of raising funds.

Treasured Ground:
A Brief History of the Vatican Apostolic Library

BY REV. LAURENCE J. SPITERI, PH.D., JCL

The Vatican Apostolic Library (henceforth BAV) is an institution that belongs to the reigning Pope. It houses the world's greatest collection of ancient, important and rare manuscripts, books, incunabula, prints and drawings, and medallions and coins. Numerous Popes have utilized the services of this venerable institution to promote scholarship, research, diplomacy, inter-religious dialog, inter-cultural understanding, and ecumenism. The BAV is not a regular library as such, but it is a library of libraries. Its patrimony is not limited to religious manuscripts and other kinds of publications. It has many manuscripts, books, objects and other items which include other religions, science, art, coins, to mention a few. Furthermore, many of its ancient walls are decorated with exquisite frescoes from contemporary artists. For the last four centuries the BAV has been located inside the Pope's Palace and accessible through an entrance in Bramante's Belvedere Courtyard. Donato Bramante (1444-1514) was a very famous Italian architect who introduced the High Renaissance architecture in Rome.

It has been reported that in ancient times Popes housed precious objects, archives, and their books in a special place where they resided. Each book, usually written on papyrus leaves or vellum was placed inside a scrinium, a cylindrical container used in ancient Rome to hold papyrus rolls. The contents of these objects comprised a Pope's current version of a library. Little is known as to what happened to these papal libraries because they usually ended up being dispersed soon after a papal death.

The earliest known inventory of a Pope's library is that of 1295. It was drawn up at the beginning of the papacy of Boniface VIII (1294-1303). This library, though carefully documented, was dispersed soon after his death. Despite the fact that there was a papal library when the papal residence was moved from Rome to Avignon, France, it is certain that no book from the papal library was taken to Avignon. Seven consecutive Popes, all French, resided in Avignon from 1309 to 1377.

(CNS PHOTO/PAUL HARING)

A new collection of books and the organization of a papal library in Avignon began under Pope John XXII (1316-1334). The papal Avignon Library was a very impressive institution. Pope Gregory XI (1370-1378) left Avignon on 13 September 1376 with the intention of permanently reestablishing the papal residence in Rome, where it has remained ever since. He entered Rome on January 17, 1377 and soon after emerged a renewed interest in studies and culture, which served as a push toward acquiring a new collection of books. Unfortunately, the project was not well organized and it would take another period of significance to usher in the creation of a papal library. The Renaissance.

The emerging spirit of the Renaissance captivated Rome and the papacy. The creator and founder of the current BAV was Pope Nicholas Right: This fresco of Christ is seen on a wall of the Vatican Apostolic Library's Salone Sistino. When the Library was expanded in the 15th century, the walls of its halls were adorned with frescoes rendered by some of the most famous artists of the Renaissance.

V (1447-1455). He aggressively undertook to institute a papal library and was determined to establish Rome as a major center of the Renaissance movement. His library comprised of some 1,300 manuscripts, all collected in the spirit of the then reigning humanistic approach, which went beyond religious boundaries. His library was a source for public consultation for the service and common interest of men of science. His project was brought to completion by Pope Sixtus IV (1471-1484), who provided a firm organization and economic stability for the papal library. This Pope enlarged the library and the walls of its four halls were covered with frescoes rendered by some of the most famous artists of the time.

Pope Sixtus V (1585-1590), due to a noticeable increase of the library's acquisitions, decided to construct a new location for the library. The project was entrusted to the famous engineer and architect Domenico Fontana (1543-1607). This is the same building which houses the BAV to this day. One of the most famous halls in the library, the Salone Sistino, is a huge hall on the top floor. It is 70 meters long and 15 meters wide and its walls and ceiling are covered with exquisite frescoes. It is currently being restored to reassume its role as the largest study hall in Europe.

The prestige which the BAV has enjoyed for the last five hundred years is due to the on-going expansion of its outstanding collections. With the passage of time, the BAV has acquired entire collections of secular and religious manuscripts, magnificent illuminated Medieval manuscripts, printed material, graphics and numismatics – all coming from diverse epochs, cultures, religions, scientific disciplines, and literary genres. Among the famous collections are the Palatine Library of Heidelberg (1623) and those of the Dukes of Urbino (1657) and Queen Christina of Sweden (1690). Among the more recent additions are the libraries of the Borghese (1891), the Barberini (1902), and the Chapter of St. Peter's Basilica (1940). The BAV also houses such treasures as manuscripts from the Imperial Library of Constantinople; the medieval manuscripts once owned by Petrarch; Latin, Greek and Oriental ancient manuscripts; Arabic, Hebrew and Ethiopic manuscripts; a collection of ancient Hindu scriptures; the original manuscript of Procopius' Secret History, written around 500 AD; Cicero's Republic; the Codex Vaticanus B, one of two surviving bibles issued by Emperor Constantine; three of the oldest surviving texts of Virgil's Aeneid; Ptolemy's Tables, a ninth century

In 2010, the Library began a project to have 82,000 manuscripts digitized and readily available online. This will make it easier for scholars to have access to the manuscripts without the cost of traveling to Rome.

facsimile of comedies written by the Roman author Terence; one of the most ancient paleo-Slavonic manuscripts; and the only surviving illustrated thirteenth century manuscript, The Story of Bayad and Riyad, an Arabic love song.

One of the more recent additions to the Library, the Mater Verbi Papyrus, was donated and presented to Pope Benedict XVI by the Atlanta-based Solidarity Foundation and the Hanna Family in 2007. This very precious manuscript contains the oldest translation of the "Our Father" dating back to around the year 200 A.D. and contains the oldest extant copy of about half of the Gospels of St. Luke and St. John.

From its origins to the present time, the BAV has been enriched with many ancient, important, and rare manuscripts, books, incunabula (books printed before 1500), prints, and medallions through donations, gifts, and acquisitions. To date, the BAV, has more than 180,000 manuscripts; more than 1.6 million printed books; 8,600 incunabula; more than 150,000 prints, drawings and engravings; more than 150,000 photographs; more than 300,000 coins and medals, including an impressive number of coins from the Roman Republic, Greek, Byzantine and Medieval Periods as well as a collection from the Orient; a collection of pontifical and Byzantine lead seals and of Roman lead tesserae; more than 10,000 plaster, glass or sulfur casts of medals and gems; and some 800 engraved Roman gems.

Since the 1900, the BAV also has a publishing department to print scientific collections, mostly related to the materials housed within the institution. Pope Pius XI (1922-1939), a former Prefect of the BAV, established the Vatican School of Library Science in 1934 to improve the scientific training of the BAV staff. The elite school today grants an undergraduate degree in Library Science.

Today some 5,000 scholars, mostly post-graduate academics, conduct research in the BAV every year. And in 2010, the Library began a project to have 82,000 manuscripts digitized and readily available online. This will make it easier for scholars to have access to the manuscripts without the cost of traveling to Rome.

The BAV underwent a three-year major renovation program and Pope Emeritus Benedict XVI (2005-2013) rededicated this venerable institution in September 2010. The same Pope wished that there be established a Foundation whose primary purpose would be to assist the BAV in its mission as well as be a source of financial support to its project which includes the restoration of the Salone Sistino to its original purpose as a study hall, the acclimatization of the vast printed books deposit, and the restoration of ancient manuscripts. Thus, the Sanctuary of Culture Foundation was established in 2013 and enjoys the personal interest and backing of the current Holy Father Pope Francis. The Foundation seeks benefactors and institutions who are willing to assist in the restoration of the treasures of the Vatican Apostolic Library, collection and preservation of ancient, medieval and Renaissance manuscripts, scholarship and research, and the promotion of significant aspects of knowledge, culture, inter-religious exchange and humanity.

The BAV provides a magnificent record of religion, science, the arts, and research as various Popes engaged themselves in a process to reach to humanistic ideals, share scholarly pursuits, and enrich not only their respective papacy but the entire world with some of the finest treasures of humanity.

Dynamic Catholics
Revitalizing the World

BY MATTHEW KELLY

Transforming people one at a time is at the heart of God's plan for the world. It is also essential to developing dynamic marriages, loving families, vibrant parish communities, thriving economies, and extraordinary nations. If you get the person right, you get the world right. Every time you become a better-version-of-yourself, the consequences of your transformation echo through your marriage, family, parish, nation, and beyond to people and places in the future. It is God who does the transforming, but only to the extent that we cooperate. God's grace is constant, never lacking. So our cooperation with God's desire to transform us is essential; it is the variable. Are you willing to let God transform you?

Helping individuals with this transformation from who they are to who they are capable of being is the great work. Is the Catholic Church the best in the world at assisting men and women in becoming all God created them to be? Most people today would say no. We could argue about it, but we shouldn't have to. Should we be unquestionably the best in the world at this? I think so.

For twenty years I have been speaking and writing about the genius of Catholicism. I have done this with the hope that it might help others to catch a glimpse of what Catholicism truly is and how it can transform us, and the world, if we embrace it. I suppose on a very basic level I want others to experience the joy that the Catholic faith has brought to my life.

In my travels I have noticed that some Catholics are more engaged than others, but I never really took the time to explore why. This is a regret I will live with for the rest of my life, because if I had taken the time to really understand the difference between highly engaged Catholics and disengaged Catholics, the work my staff and I have undertaken over these past two decades could have been infinitely more effective. That has all changed now. But we are getting ahead of ourselves. This is how it all began. . . .

Roughly 7 percent of Catholic parishioners are doing almost everything in their faith community and paying almost entirely for the maintenance and mission of the parish.

Several years ago I was having dinner with a group of priests in Minnesota before an event. I was the only non-cleric at the table, and some of the priests started talking about different things that were happening in their parishes. One of the priests was very young, and he was lamenting about how few people were actively involved at his parish. My mind was starting to drift toward what I was going to speak about at the event when I heard something that jolted me back into the moment. Sitting at the head of the table like a king was a warm, humorous, and completely down-to-earth priest who must have weighed 350 pounds and been almost eighty years old. Waving a finger down the table, he said to the young priest, "Listen, I have been the pastor of seven parishes over the past forty years, and I can tell you that it doesn't matter where you go, you will discover the same fifty people do everything in a parish."

The comment got my attention. I immediately wondered if it was true. In the following weeks I started making informal phone calls to some pastors I knew. I asked them questions like:

- Who are your most engaged parishioners?
- Why are they so engaged?
- What percentage of registered parishioners is actively involved in the parish?
- What percentage of parishioners gives regularly to the parish?

The answers they gave me seemed to anecdotally support the priest's comment, but I wanted data.

There is a concept known as the Pareto Principle. It states, in essence, that roughly 80 percent of effects come from 20 percent of causes. In business this same concept is often referred to as the 80/20 principle. The idea is that 80 percent of your business comes from 20 percent of your customers. For example, while Coca-Cola has literally billions of customers, its largest are companies such as McDonald's, Marriott, and Delta Air Lines, who serve Coca-Cola products to millions of people every day. The concept can also be applied to products. Eighty percent of most companies' profits tend to come from 20 percent of their products. For example, consider a Barnes & Noble bookstore. There may be a hundred thousand different titles on the shelves in any given store, but 80 percent of their profits will come from 20 percent of those titles—the books that sell over and over again.

I had always been curious about whether the 80/20 principle would apply to the Church, and the priest's comment had piqued my curiosity. Did the rule hold true in Catholic parishes? The only way to find out for sure would be to obtain some hard data. Over the course of many months I studied a series of parishes from coast to coast, examining two areas in particular: volunteerism and financial contribution. Both are significant signs of engagement. What I found left me speechless.

Did the 80/20 principle hold true in Catholic parishes? No. Not even close. This is what I discovered:

- 6.4 percent of registered parishioners contribute 80 percent of the volunteer hours in a parish
- 6.8 percent of registered parishioners donate 80 percent of financial contributions
- There is an 84 percent overlap between the two groups

Note: Unless otherwise stated, all statistics come from research conducted by The Dynamic Catholic Institute.

I was amazed. Roughly 7 percent of Catholic parishioners are doing almost everything in their faith community and paying almost entirely for the maintenance and mission of the parish. This led me to the seminal question: What is the difference between engaged Catholics and disengaged Catholics? It came as a staggering surprise to discover that there was no significant research available on this question.

The future of the Catholic Church depends upon us finding out what makes this small group of Catholics so engaged. If we cannot identify what drives their engagement, we cannot replicate it.

For the rest of this article I will refer to these highly engaged parishioners as either the 7% or Dynamic Catholics. There is much we can learn from them. It is, however, critical to understand before we go any further that generalizations can provide incredible insight, but they can also be very dangerous if taken too far or out of context. The 7% are by no means perfect, but there is something about them that is worth exploring. Most of them are not spiritual champions, and they would be the first to admit that. They are also often quick to point out that it doesn't take much to be at the top of the heap among Catholics today. The bar is not exactly set very high. But the 7% are the most highly engaged among us. I will refer to their less engaged counterparts as the 93%.

There are almost endless ways to segment both the 7% and the 93%. Not everyone in the 7% is the same. Even among this group, engagement, attitudes, and spiritual habits differ significantly. Needless to say, among the other 93% there are enormous differences. Some in this group come to Mass every Sunday while others are almost completely disengaged. Keep in mind that this group includes everyone from 7.01 percent to 100 percent (more than seventy-one million of the seventy-seven million Catholics in America).

Our potential is incredible. The Catholic Church is a sleeping giant. We literally have the power to change the world.

At first I found these results very discouraging, but it turns out this might be the best news the Catholic Church has received in decades. Why is it good news that only 7 percent of American Catholics are highly engaged? Well, think about the tremendous contribution that the Catholic Church makes every day in communities large and small across America and around the world. Every single day we serve Catholics and non-Catholics around the world by feeding more people, housing more people, clothing more people, caring for more sick people, visiting more prisoners, and educating more students than any other institution on the planet. Now remember that all this is less than 7 percent of our capability. That is good news.

If just 7 percent of Catholics are accomplishing more than 80 percent of what we are doing today, imagine what 14 percent could do. Not to mention what 21 percent or 35 percent could accomplish. Our potential is incredible. The Catholic Church is a sleeping giant. We literally have the power to change the world.

If we engaged just another 1 percent of your parishioners over the next year, transforming them into Dynamic Catholics, it would be a game changer. It would result in 11.4 percent more volunteer hours, which would allow you to serve other parishioners and your community that much more effectively. It would also bring about an 11.4 percent increase in revenue, which would allow your parish to invest in powerful and important ministries that would further drive engagement. All this as a result of a shift from 7 percent to 8 percent—just 1 percent more highly engaged Catholics.

Then I started to think, imagine what we could do if we could transform another 7 percent into highly engaged parishioners over the next seven years. One percent each year. It would not mean every person in the parish would be passionately interested and engaged—just 14 percent. And imagine the incredible outreach, service, and spiritual development your parish could deliver.

This is the 1 percent that could change the world. If we can focus on engaging 1 percent more of our parishioners in a really intentional way each year, we can literally change the world. If you have a thousand adults in your parish, that means transforming just ten more into highly engaged members this year.

For months after this discovery, I was constantly thinking about how we could go about increasing the number of Dynamic Catholics in a parish. Then one day the obvious finally occurred to me: We needed to do some more research. We needed to find out what made the 7% different. What do the 7% do, think, and believe that is different from what the 93% do, think, and believe?

There are many things that make the 7% different from the rest of Catholics. But there are four things that the 7% have in common. I have named these four defining attributes and behaviors the four signs of a Dynamic Catholic. These four signs are the life-giving spiritual habits that animate their lives. I am convinced that if we work intentionally to help people develop a vibrant spirituality through these four signs, we will see incredible things happen in their lives and in the life of the Church.

For too long we have been hypnotized by complexity. There is so much to Catholicism. It is so rich and deep. As a result, when we try to share the faith with others they are often quickly overwhelmed. Those who yearn for spiritual renewal in their lives usually don't know where to start. The four signs cut through the complexity and provide a practical and accessible model for engaging Catholics. They provide a simple and understandable starting point. They also provide an enduring model for continually taking Catholics who are already engaged to the next level. Wherever you are in your spiritual journey, whether you are engaged or disengaged, I hope you will find in the four signs a model for renewal.

The Four Signs – an Overview

The things we do repeatedly determine our character and destiny. This is equally true for an athlete, a business leader, a parent, or a Catholic. Life-giving spiritual habits are what set the 7% apart from the rest. When I studied the lives of Dynamic Catholics I discovered many things they did that the other 93 percent of Catholics tended not to do. In fact, I identified 264 behaviors or qualities that were unique to the 7%. I then examined the cause-and-effect relationship among all 264 behaviors, and the overlap that existed among them, to arrive at the four signs of a Dynamic Catholic.

For example, some of the highly engaged Catholics among the 7% pray the rosary every day with great discipline, others attend daily Mass, and some have a big, comfortable chair where they begin each day in prayer and reflection. Each of these finds its place under the first sign: Prayer.

There are some among the 7% who will tell you that going to daily Mass is the very core of their spiritual life. The danger is to think that is the answer for everyone. Daily Mass is fabulous and has transformed many lives, but less than 1 percent of American Catholics go to daily Mass. More important, for most people it is simply not possible. We need solutions that are accessible to all, that inspire people to say, "I can do that!"

There are many ways to live out each of the four signs; I witnessed this among the people interviewed. The four signs are sufficiently focused to produce the intended result and yet sufficiently broad to allow each person to approach them in his or her own way.

Once again, let me point out that the 7% are by no means perfect. In fact, the research discovered many things about them that repel the 93%. The 7% do things that discourage others from becoming more engaged. They can be territorial, excluding others from joining groups or activities. They often speak in a "church language" that the 93% don't understand. They suffer from what I would call spiritual amnesia, meaning that they have forgotten or block out how resistant to God they were at different times in their spiritual journey, or how far from God they have been at times in their lives. This spiritual amnesia robs them of the ability to relate to others who are less engaged. It also often makes them intolerant of less engaged Catholics, thinking that those people should just "get with the program."

Whatever shortcomings the 7% have can be overcome if they embrace the four signs more completely. The four signs are not only a model to reengage disengaged Catholics but also a model of continuous renewal for even the most highly engaged Catholics.

The Four Signs of a Dynamic Catholic are:

- PRAYER
- STUDY
- GENEROSITY
- EVANGELIZATION

These may not seem like any great discovery at first glance. What I find most fascinating is the way Dynamic Catholics approach each of the four signs. What I find most admirable is the almost unerring consistency with which they apply themselves to the four signs, especially the first and second.

Here is a brief overview of the four signs.

The First Sign - Prayer

Dynamic Catholics have a daily commitment to prayer.

God is not a distant force to these people, but rather a personal friend and adviser. They are trying to listen to the voice of God in their lives, and believe doing God's will is the only path that leads to lasting happiness in this changing world (and beyond).

The 93% certainly pray, but it tends to be when the mood strikes them or when some crisis emerges. The 7% pray in this way also, but their spontaneous prayer is deeply rooted in their daily discipline and commitment to a prayer routine.

[Vibrant Catholics] yearn to help people find answers to the questions they have about the faith. They want others to experience the joy that comes from having a vibrant relationship with God.

The Second Sign - Study

Dynamic Catholics are continuous learners.

On average Dynamic Catholics spend fourteen minutes each day learning more about the faith. They see themselves as students of Jesus and his Church, and proactively make an effort to allow his teachings to form them.

The second sign is all about continuous learning, the daily discipline of exploring the way of Jesus and the genius of Catholicism.

The Third Sign - Generosity

Dynamic Catholics are generous.

Dynamic Catholics are filled with a spirit of service and are generous stewards of their time, talent, and treasure.

The 7% are universally described as being generous, not just with money and time, but with their love, appreciation, praise, virtue, and encouragement. They see generosity as the heart of Christianity and the proof that the teachings of Christ have taken root in their lives.

Generosity is not a religious requirement for the 7%; it's a way of life, a way of bringing the love of God to the world.

The Fourth Sign – Evangelization

Dynamic Catholics invite others to grow spiritually by sharing the love of God with them.

Having seen how a vibrant spiritual life has transformed them and every aspect of their lives, highly engaged Catholics want others to experience the joy that flows from having a dynamic relationship with God.

Highly engaged Catholics instinctively know that this is an essential part of the Christian life. Sharing the faith (Evangelization) is not something they do; it is a part of who they are. Evangelization is a natural overflow of the first and second signs. In the same way they are generous with their time and money, they generously share their spirituality whenever the opportunity emerges. They yearn to help people find answers to the questions they have about the faith. They want others to experience the joy that comes from having a vibrant relationship with God. But even the most highly engaged Catholics need to become much more intentional and proactive when it comes to the fourth sign.

Imagine if we discovered that all highly engaged Catholics had four things in common. Then imagine if it could be demonstrated that when someone started embracing these four things they were relatively quickly transformed from a disengaged Catholic into a highly engaged Catholic. Would you be interested in knowing what those four things were? And if we had this knowledge, if we knew what these four things were, what would we do with that information? Wouldn't it make sense to intentionally encourage these four things and use them to focus the way we teach and lead?

We now know what those four things are. They are the four signs of a Dynamic Catholic: prayer, study, generosity, and evangelization. It is my hope that they will reinvigorate you, and through you, your parish, so that together we can serve your community and the world in ways that inspire many others to give Catholicism another look.

We have a long way to go in order to live up to God's vision for our lives and his vision for the Church. The people of our times desperately need us to live up to that vision. It is a monumental task. How will we get there? How do we transport whole generations from disappointment and discouragement to hope and engagement? Little by little.

When we become convinced of "I can do that!" our lives begin to flood with hope... and hope is a beautiful thing. It is time for Catholics to be filled again with that hope. The hope that comes from knowing that we have something of immeasurable value to offer to the world. When a group of people becomes full of hope, incredible things begin to happen.

Something wonderful is about to happen!

Pastoral Activity:
Maximizing Efficiency through Staffing

BY PROF. CHARLES E. ZECH

One of the most limited resources in a parish is a pastor's time. Yet, because of a variety of trends outside of the pastor's control, pastoring a parish has arguably never been more complicated. Trends such as declining vocations to the priesthood along with the migration of the Catholic population from the inner city to the suburbs and from the Northeast and Midwest to the South and Southwest have combined to cause dioceses to merge parishes and/or frequently ask some priests to pastor more than one parish. Combine these with other trends such as the increase in multi-cultural parishes and the result is a pattern of larger, more complex parish organizational structures. They are often pastored by a single priest, sometimes just a few years (or less) out of seminary.

Canon 519 states that pastors are called to carry out the functions of sanctifying, teaching, and governing. Most priests are very comfortable with their sanctifying and teaching roles. It is in governing where they tend to be least prepared but where they spend an inordinate amount of their time.

Canon 519 states that pastors are called to carry out the functions of sanctifying, teaching, and governing. Most priests are very comfortable with their sanctifying and teaching roles. It is in governing where they tend to be least prepared but where they spend an inordinate amount of their time. As much as many of them would like, pastors can't avoid their responsibility for administration. They need to accept administration as part of their pastoral ministry.

Though some parishioners expect their pastor to be on call 24/7, surveys show that many pastors usually spend closer to 60-70 hours per week serving their parishioners. Individual pastors must then set limits and recognize that they can't do everything. They need to make choices about what is essential to their ministry and what they can delegate to others while still maintaining ultimate responsibility for sanctifying, teaching, and governing. An obvious first step is with the governance responsibility.

Governing entails two distinct aspects: Managing and Leading.

Managing includes activities such as:

- Focusing on the efficiency of the parish's operations
- Keeping parish committees engaged
- Assimilating conflicting perspectives among staff and among parishioners
- Monitoring performance
- Influencing decisions

Leadership involves:

- Setting a vision for the future and communicating that vision
- Keeping up with emerging trends
- Emphasizing the parish's values
- Challenging parishioners with new goals and aspirations
- Generating a sense of excitement

Many pastors find themselves spending excessive amounts of time engaged in management activities. While these activities are necessary to keep the parish functioning smoothly, they do not normally enhance the parish's discipleship, contribute to its ability to plan for the future, or spawn much vitality or enthusiasm around the parish's mission. Many of them can be delegated without diminishing the pastor's ministerial call. In carrying out his governance role a pastor should be placing a much higher priority on leadership.

One solution to the problem of overworked pastors is to provide the pastor with paid staff. But what form should that staff take? Would it be most beneficial for a pastor to have an ordained parochial vicar (assuming that the diocese has sufficient priests so it can assign one)? Or would a professional parish administrator, such as a parish business manager or director of administration, be more effective? Maybe paid pastoral ministers such as a Director of Religious Education or Music Minister would be most useful? Parishes don't have unlimited budgets so for all of these the pastor needs to decide if a part-time staff member provides sufficient support or is it essential that the worker be full-time?

The Impact of Staff on Pastor Activities

A 2010 study of Catholic parishes sponsored by the Cooperative Congregational Studies Partnership and conducted by the Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate (CARA) surveyed 390 Catholic parishes, asking a variety of questions about parish life. One series of questions concerned the pastor's work load. The survey asked pastors how much time they spent in 11 activities. Below, these 11 activities have been further divided into three categories:

Ministerial Activities

- Planning and leading worship
- Evangelizing inactive Catholics/ recruiting new members
- Providing pastoral care (visiting the sick, counseling people)
- Leading small groups (for sharing, support, spiritual growth)
- Teaching people about the faith and scripture
- Engaging youth and young adults

Leadership Activities

- Developing and promoting a vision and purpose for the parish
- Representing the parish in the community

Management Activities

- Recruiting and training lay leaders
- Administration, supervision and committee meetings
- Dealing with conflict and disagreements

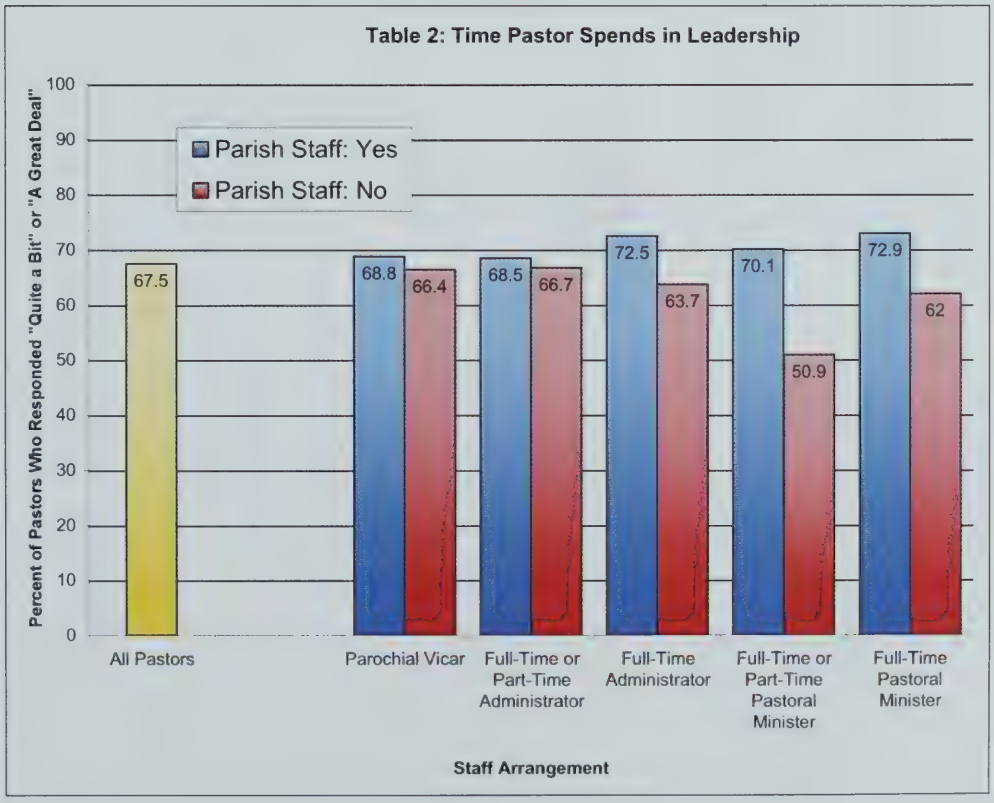
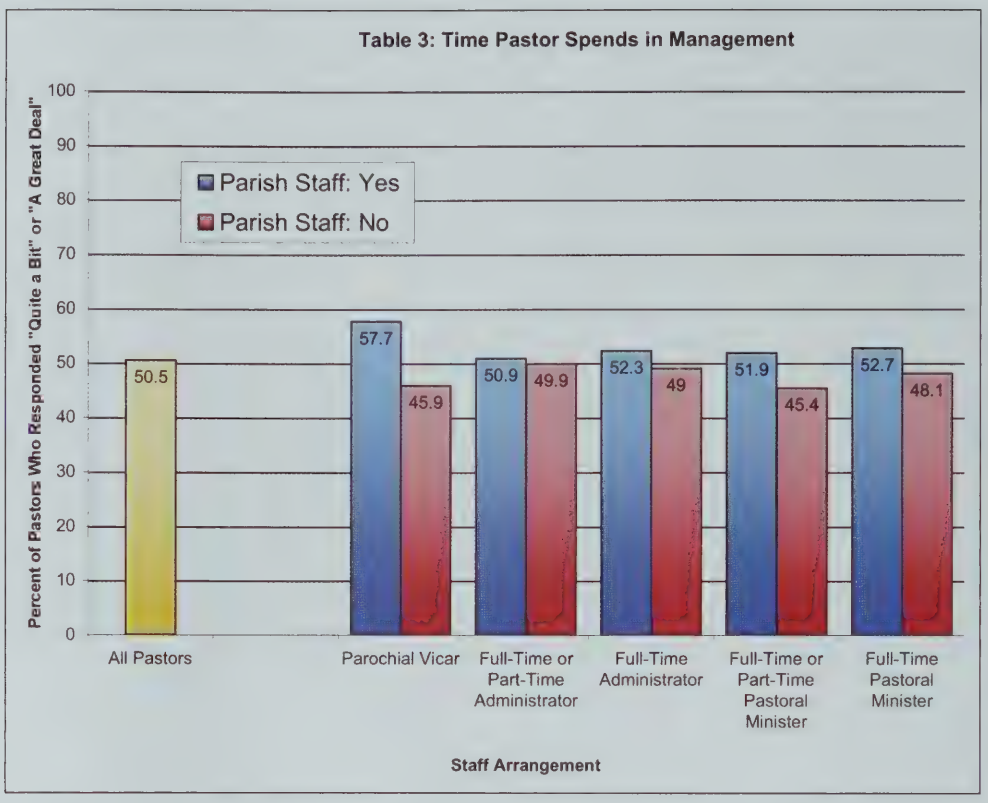
In the CARA survey, pastors were asked how much time they spent in each of the 11 activities using a scale ranging from 'very little' to a 'great deal'. They were also asked about the availability of parish staff.



The particular staffing arrangements studied include:



- The assignment of a parochial vicar to the parish
- Paid lay administrative professionals such as a business manager, full-time or part-time
- Paid lay program professionals such as a director of religious education, full-time or part-time

Tables 1 through 3 show the impact of various staffing options on pastors' time in each of three categories: ministry, leadership, and management. The red 'No' bars represent the pastors that do not employ the staffing arrangement. For parish administrative and ministry staff the results are shown for both the existence of such a staff person whether they be full-time or part-time and then only for full-time staff. This is done to provide information on whether the parish needs a full-time staff person or if merely having someone in that position, whether they are full-time or part-time, is sufficient. Each staffing option is described below.

Parochial Vicar

The assignment of a parochial vicar can be an attractive staffing option for a pastor. That is because while pastors likely value their ministerial role more highly than governance, they recognize that their parishioners can be short-changed if only one priest is available to deliver on all of the varied ways in which ministry is carried out. Through their ordination parochial vicars are obviously qualified to carry out some ministerial activities that are not available to lay staff.

In fact Tables 1 through 3 demonstrate that when compared to parishes where there was no parochial vicar, pastors who had been assigned a parochial vicar spent significantly more time on management activities, while the differences in time spent leading and ministering were essentially insignificant. A parochial vicar is most equipped to take on some ministerial tasks, such as presiding over funerals and weddings, freeing the pastor to spend more time on management activities. In addition the parochial vicar himself needs some managing. The downside is that it appears as though pastors are reluctant to give up much if any of their time spent on ministerial activities, perhaps because pastors find them to be more enjoyable than governance.

Parish Administrator/ Business Manager

Another way to relieve pastors of some of the burden of the governance function is to provide them with a paid (full-time or part-time) professional admin-

Another way to relieve pastors of some of the burden of the governance function is to provide them with a paid (full-time or part-time) professional administrator... In some dioceses it is mandated that parishes provide a professional administrator.

A graduate of a Lay Leadership Certificate program receives a congratulatory hug from his family following ceremonies at the University of St. Mary of the Lake in Mundelein, Ill. According to CARA, an estimated 20,000 people are currently enrolled in lay pastoral ministry certificate or degree programs.

istrator. Different parishes give this person different titles (parish administrator, parish business manager, minister of administration, etc.) and their pastors delegate a variety of governance functions to them, including parish finances, facilities, and personnel. Any management responsibilities that the pastor can delegate will free him up for more time to be spent in ministerial and leadership activities. In some dioceses it is mandated that parishes provide a professional administrator. The Archdiocese of New York, for example, has implemented the "Making All Things New" initiative, a strategic parish-planning program that aims to improve parishes to better serve the faithful. As part of this initiative, parishes may consolidate, and the clergy will take on greater pastoral and administrative responsibilities. Some of these administrative responsibilities will need to be delegated to qualified parish business managers. To ensure the parishes will be managed by the most highly qualified business managers, the archdiocese is subsidizing the education of parishioners who wish to earn an MS in Church Management. Cardinal Timothy Dolan, the Archbishop of New York, has said that through the process of realignment he wishes to liberate his clergy to do more pastoral work, not "be into replacing boilers and leaky roofs in 150-year-old parishes".

How effective are parish administrators at impacting a pastor's work load? Does it make a difference if that administrator is full-time or part-time? Tables 1 through 3 reveal that pastors who were assisted by either full-time or part-time parish administrators spent essentially the same amount of time in leadership, management, and ministerial activities as those who didn't have a pastoral administrator. But pastors who were assisted by a full-time parish administrator devoted significantly more time in ministry activities and in leadership, while spending a small (and insignificant) additional time performing management activities. In fact, the impact of a full-time administrator on the pastor's ability to spend more time on ministerial activities had the greatest impact of any of the staffing options analyzed.

The obvious conclusion is that a full-time parish administrator is much preferred to a part-time administrator.

Pastoral Ministers

In today's Church many lay parishioners are carrying out their baptismal commitment by earning degrees and serving their parishes as lay pastoral ministers. These include Directors of Religious Education, Music Ministers, Liturgists, Youth Ministers, and many others. In fact CARA estimates that there are currently more than 20,000 people enrolled in lay pastoral ministry certificate or degree programs. While the employment of paid lay pastoral ministers was first initiated with Vatican II, this trend accelerated following the 2005 release of the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops' pastoral letter "Coworkers in the Vineyard of the Lord", in which the bishops wrote, "All of the baptized are called to work toward the transformation of the world. Most do this in the secular realm; some do this by working in the church and focusing on the building of ecclesial communion, which has among its purposes the transformation of the world."

Tables 1 through 3 reveals that pastors who were assisted by either full-time or part-time paid pastoral ministers spent significantly more time engaged in leadership activities, slightly more time managing, and slightly less time (although an insignificant difference) engaged in ministerial activities. On the other hand those who had at least one full-time paid pastoral minister on their staff spent significantly more time leading and engaged in ministerial activities and slightly more time managing than those who did not have such a staff person. Much like the use of parochial vicars described above pastors hire pastoral ministers to assist them in their pastoral ministry work, freeing them up to spend more time managing. Hiring paid staff, whether full-time or part-time, places a greater managerial burden on the pastor.

The conclusion is that employing paid pastoral ministers, whether part-time or full-time, frees up the pastor to spend more time leading but also requires a slightly greater commitment of management time on his part. Employing full-time pastoral ministers also enable the pastor to spend more time devoted to ministerial activities, which they most likely prefer.

Discussion

The assumption behind this study is that our parishes would better be served if pastors could be relieved of some of their governance duties (although not their responsibility) so they can be freed up to pursue more parish ministry activities for which they were ordained. Further, of the governance responsibilities, the parish would benefit by having its pastor spend less time managing and more time leading. The data shows that the best overall option to achieve these multiple goals is to provide the parish with a full-time parish administrator such as a business manager. A close second is the hiring of a pastoral minister such as a Director of Religious Education (DRE). Of the options studied, providing the parish with a parochial vicar is the least effective in achieving the goals of enabling more time for the pastor to spend on ministry and leadership and less time on managing.

Once the data had been compiled a group of pastors were interviewed to get their take on the issue. When pastors were asked about the advantages and disadvantages of staffing alternatives they tended to put a much more human face on the choices.

For example in discussing the pros and cons of a parochial vicar versus paid parish professional staff, one pastor explained his preference for paid staff by noting that he can choose his staff himself, while a parochial vicar is assigned to the parish. Another pastor, sounding a similar theme, preferred paid staff since they tend to serve longer in the parish than parochial vicars, who tend to be moved from parish to parish every few years. He valued the continuity of his relationship with his staff. A third pastor, perhaps speaking for many pastors, observed that in his 18 years as a pastor he had never been assigned a parochial vicar (a not unusual situation) and admitted he probably wouldn't know how to use one if one was assigned.

In discussing the benefits of a parish administrator, most pastors cited their lack of confidence in their own understanding of accounting and finance along with their reluctance to get involved in facilities matters. One pastor, citing the managerial task of dealing with conflict and disagreements expressed his gratitude to his parish administrator who typically "gets it first" and resolves the issue before it gets to him. Parish administrators who can also handle human resource issues were especially valued.

One pastor expressed a preference for a pastoral minister such as a DRE since he believed that adult formation was the most critical task in his parish and his DRE was responsible for all levels of religious education up to and including adult formation.

The data presented here represents averages and clearly masks differences in parish situation. A pastor of a parish with no school but a large religious education component could well prefer a DRE over any other option. A pastor in a multi-cultural parish might place priority on a parochial vicar with language skills. A pastor of a parish struggling financially might find the greatest need for a parish business manager.

But no matter what the parish situation, it is clear that under the current circumstances described earlier a primary parish staffing goal should be to alleviate the management burden faced by pastors in order to free them up to focus on their priestly teaching and sanctifying roles. Ideally a particular parish staffing arrangement would allow the pastor to spend significantly more time in ministerial and leadership duties and relieve some of the burden on him of management activities.

The Four Disciplines of a Smart, Healthy, and Holy Church

BY MATTHEW F. MANION

Do you know which department in the hospital is by far the most effective and efficient in fulfilling its mission? According to Patrick Lencioni, best-selling author and leadership guru, it is the emergency room.

In a hospital emergency room everyone is clear about their purpose – to save human lives. When someone comes in with a life-threatening trauma you don't hear the staff in the emergency room saying, "That's not my job," or "That's not my role." While it is clear that nurses, doctors, orderlies and staff all have specific skills and roles to play, in an emergency you see people pitching in and doing whatever they can to save that life. Any organizational politics or morale issues or indifference are forgotten in order to save a patient.

In order to create a parish and diocesan experience better aligned with the vision of Jesus Christ and the Catholic Church, we must learn something from what goes on in an emergency room and apply that to our local church. As Pope Francis said, "I see clearly that the thing the Church needs most today is the ability to heal wounds and to warm the hearts of the faithful; it needs nearness, proximity. I see the Church as a field hospital after battle." Saving lives in an emergency room is noble and important, but fulfilling the Great Commission and participating in the salvation of souls is even more crucial and is why the Church exists. Yet we do not always fulfill this commission with the effectiveness and efficiency seen in a field hospital or emergency room.

The Catholic Church, like many organizations is filled with very smart people. Our priests and bishops all have advanced degrees and are extremely learned individuals. Many parish and diocesan staff have years of practical experience and advanced study in their vocational fields. The church is blessed with excellent talent when it comes to catechesis, evangelization, worship, youth ministry, service and outreach and so many other areas. We have the most educated laity in history and there is a wealth of expertise in the pews and on some staffs when it comes to financial management, facilities planning, strategic planning, and people management.

Unfortunately, in today's world being "smart" is no longer enough. The reality is that the greatest barrier to an organization in fulfilling its purpose is not a lack of "smart" but a lack of organizational "health." Healthy organizations have minimal politics, high morale, high engagement, role clarity, and low turnover of key leaders. Yet most organizational leaders spend 98% of their time on becoming "smarter" and only 2% of their time on creating a healthier organization.

The reality is the greatest barrier to an organization in fulfilling its purpose is not a lack of "smart" but a lack of organizational "health."

This is as true for the Church as it is for any other organization. We are always looking for the next program, the next course, the next initiative that will move our people forward. And while those programs, courses, and initiatives are good and help people, perhaps we would have greater success and impact in spreading the Good News of Jesus Christ if we spent more time on organizational health.

So many good and holy people who love the Lord have given their lives in service to the Catholic Church. Yet when asked what is most challenging in their roles or what are the greatest obstacles they face as a parish or diocese, 9 times out of 10, the answer has to do with organizational health. They are frustrated with a co-worker, with the shortage of people who care about their faith, with a lack of volunteers, or with a lack of clarity about what is expected of them. They may disagree with the direction of the local church or more frequently, the lack of direction in their local church. They may question the allocation of resources and disagree about what is most important. They are exhausted by the turf wars and lack of cooperation and collaboration among ministries, parishes, and diocesan departments. They want to belong to a smart, healthy and therefore holy Church.

As disciples of Jesus Christ, it makes sense that we would live disciplined lives as individuals, but that mindset needs to be expanded so that we also have disciplined corporate lives in the holy ordering of our parishes and dioceses. We have seen numerous examples of how a commitment to the four disciplines outlined below has renewed the life of parishes and dioceses. There is an energy and enthusiasm in these communities. There is a commitment to grow spiritually and to invite others to encounter the Lord and grow in their Catholic faith. The sense of mission unites people and turns their focus outward in service to others. The People of God experience more of the mission and vision of Jesus Christ as it is lived out today in the Catholic Church.

Leaders who practice the Four Disciplines of a Smart, Healthy, and Holy Church:

- Build and Maintain a Cohesive Leadership Team
- Create Organizational Clarity
- Over-communicate Clarity
- Reinforce Clarity through Persons, Ministries, and Structures

Discipline 1: Build and Maintain a Cohesive Leadership Team

Years ago there was a diocese where the youth ministry office and the evangelization office worked together to plan a series of diocesan holy hours to promote vocations to the priesthood and religious life. They had lay volunteers lined up to get the word out, they had priests and parishes that agreed to host the first year's worth of holy hours and the archbishop had a tentative date on his calendar to join them. Unfortunately, the youth ministry office and the evangelization office were in two different secretariats and their leaders were not part of a cohesive leadership team at the time. When the leaders heard of these plans, they immediately killed the concept because neither wanted the other to get credit for the idea.

Pope Francis prays as he leads ecumenical vespers at the Basilica of St. Paul Outside the Walls in Rome Jan. 25. The service marked the closing of the Week of Prayer for Christian unity as well as the feast of the Conversion of St. Paul.

While this is one of the more egregious examples we have seen, a lack of unity in the leadership team often leads to decisions and actions that compromise or conflict with the work of the Church.

Jesus is the ultimate model of leadership and we need to encourage leaders of smart, healthy, and holy churches to follow his example. One of the first things Jesus did when he began his public ministry was to recruit a team of 12 apostles. He spent three years living with them, serving with them, and forming them for the ministry for which they had been called. He poured into them and developed them so they could carry on his mission with one voice.

Good leaders who want to more effectively shepherd and lead their local church should begin by building and maintaining a Cohesive Leadership Team. This team is recruited by the leader because of their technical competence for their given roles and because their gifts, talents, and interpersonal skills complement the gifts, talents, and skills of the leader. This is a team that trusts one another, prays together, engages in constructive conflict, commits to group decisions, and holds one another accountable. It acts like the team in an emergency room or field hospital with a lack of ego and unified commitment to the mission.

There is an energy and enthusiasm in these communities. There is a commitment to grow spiritually and to invite others to encounter the Lord and grow in their Catholic faith. The sense of mission unites people and turns their focus outward in service to others.

One of the more encouraging signs we have seen in recent years is the number of bishops and pastors who have made the courageous and difficult decision to build and maintain this type of leadership team. It takes time to think through the needs of the team and then to make the changes necessary to put a team like this in place. Once a leader has the right people, it takes more time to set them up and "charter" the team, so they understand their purpose, values, behavioral norms, ground rules, overall goals and outcomes. But that investment upfront pays huge dividends in the long run as you will not have a smart and healthy organization if it does not start at the top. The discipline to build and maintain a cohesive leadership team is the first key to creating organizational health, but by itself it is insufficient.

Our faith tells us that we must abandon the old ways of doing things in order to participate in new life-giving activities. This is true on a personal level and on an organizational level.

Discipline 2:
Create Organizational Clarity

I love to ask parish and diocesan leaders how many people they have in their parish or diocese. They usually reply with one of two answers – the number of people who go to Mass each week or the number of Catholics in their parish or diocese. Either of those answers reveals an understandable yet very dangerous misunderstanding. Canonically, the bishop or pastor is responsible for all of the souls living in a particular geography, whether those souls are Catholic or not.

It is extremely inspiring to see the shift in thinking when leaders embrace this responsibility. For example, one parish had 14,000 people living within its boundaries, 3,500 of whom were Catholic and approximately 800 of whom attended Mass each week. Mass attendance had been steadily declining for about 20 years and many in parish leadership were focused on how to meet the needs of the 800 so that Mass attendance would not continue to decline.

Focusing on declining Mass attendance is a good thing, but leadership had lost sight of their core purpose as a parish. When asked to prayerfully consider what it meant to be the Catholic Church for the 14,000 souls in their parish and not just the 800 that came to Mass, their priorities changed dramatically. They rediscovered their call to evangelize and focused on becoming a people and a parish that would bring the love of Jesus to their community. They realized a need to grow personally in their faith so they could more effectively witness to others. They evaluated their service and outreach from the perspective of the 14,000 and reframed much of their communication and methodology to include the possibility of discussing how God was present in the ministry along with an invitation to follow Jesus.

In addition to the blessing of the ongoing conversion of its members, there were other, more measurable, results of shepherding the larger community. Over time this focus on being Church to the 14,000 led some of the Catholics who had stopped going to Mass to come back. Others who were not Catholic responded by joining the Church. The consistent decline in Mass attendance stopped and the number of people experiencing the grace of the Eucharist is increasing again. This happened because a cohesive leadership team was able to create organizational clarity.

Healthy, vibrant dioceses and parishes Create Organizational Clarity by definitively answering a series of questions regarding vision, values, purpose, and priorities. This helps parishes and dioceses clarify why they exist and what difference it would make if they no longer existed (purpose), how they make decisions and interact with one another (values), and where the Lord is calling their local community (vision).

A key component in creating organizational clarity is to assess a church's effectiveness in fulfilling five foundational ministries:

- Sacraments and Worship
- Education and Formation
- Governance and Administration
- Service and Outreach
- Evangelization and Vocations

While a particular diocese or parish might change the order or terminology, most agree these reflect their core, ongoing work. They know that they must attend to them, their mission is dependent on them, and others benefit from them.

When these five ongoing foundational ministries are understood along with the changing needs, opportunities, demands, and resources of the parish or diocese, certain pastoral priorities begin to emerge. The prayerful discernment of no more than three pastoral priorities at any time helps to create organizational clarity. These are thoughtful and discriminating initiatives that rise to the top of the church's leadership agenda for a period of 2-3 years. They become the driving initiative for action and leadership in service to the parish or diocesan vision and all other decisions are made with these three priorities in mind.

Limiting the pastoral priorities to three or fewer has several advantages. First, if everything is important then nothing is important and there will be a lack of organizational clarity. Second, most reasonable people in a parish or diocese agree on the top two or three issues that need to be addressed, but will disagree vehemently about what is number six or eight on the list. The objective is to focus on what unites and is most important and tackle those first. The final reason for three priorities is that most people can remember three things. Three pastoral priorities will provide the focus and clarity that is key to organizational health.

Discipline 3:
Over-Communicate Clarity

Research has consistently shown that most people need to hear a message seven different times and often in several different media before the message sticks. Experience shows that this is not true when it comes to the Catholic Church. People need to hear the message not seven times, but, "seventy times seven" times!

Father Mark Ivany, pastor of the Church of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary in Washington, helps volunteer Melvin Anderson move pallets of cranberry sauce to stock the shelves of his church's Helping Hand Outreach Program in this 2013 photo. A report released April 24 says that despite secularization and a decline in formal religious affiliation, especially among the young, the efforts of religious groups "remain essential" for helping the poor and finding solutions to economic inequality.

When a parish or diocese has taken the time to build and maintain a cohesive leadership team, and that team has led the church in prayerfully creating organizational clarity about its purpose, values, vision, and priorities, the next step is to over-communicate that clarity. All leaders take on an additional role for the community as the CRO, or Chief Reminding Officer. They need to consistently promulgate the vision and priorities in a variety of settings and forms. The work of over-communicating clarity is only done when everyone in the parish or diocese can easily articulate the vision and priorities and begins to make decisions in light of those discerned priorities. This point leads to the fourth discipline of a smart, healthy, and holy Church.

Discipline Four:
Reinforce Clarity through Persons, Ministries, and Structures

The fourth discipline moves the vision for the organization from a concept to reality. Many organizations who invest in the first three disciplines can make a common mistake and sabotage their good work in implementation. The mistake is to announce the new vision and priorities and expect everyone to put time and effort into them in addition to everything else they had already been doing. The more effective leadership action is to help every person in the organization re-evaluate their roles and activities and align them with the vision and priorities.

The most important thing to remember is that the goal is not simply to be smart and healthy but to grow in holiness and help others in the field hospital to do the same.

Parish and diocesan leadership reinforces organizational clarity when it not only gives people permission to let go of certain things, but when it requires it. Our faith tells us that we must abandon the old ways of doing things in order to participate in new life-giving activities. This is true on a personal level and on an organizational level.

This will mean that certain activities, functions, and ministries will need to be stopped or at least put on hold for a while so that the appropriate attention can be placed on the discerned pastoral priorities. The parish and diocesan structures should support the priorities and may need to be adjusted to make the vision a reality. This requires courageous leadership from the bishop or pastor and unified support from the cohesive leadership team.

The Catholic Church is filled with very smart people who know how to lead and serve very smart communities. To increase our effectiveness in carrying out the mission and vision of Jesus Christ, we must focus on becoming healthy as well. These four disciplines have been shown to improve the organizational health of a wide variety of parishes and dioceses in the United States. The most important thing to remember is that the goal is not simply to be smart and healthy but to grow in holiness and help others in the field hospital to do the same.

Women Religious: Adaptation and New Life

BY ERICK BERRELLEZA, S.J., MARY L. GAUTIER, PH.D. AND MARK M. GRAY, PH.D.

In spring 2014, the Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate (CARA) initiated a longitudinal study of women religious in the United States drawing on data reported by the religious institutes of women listed in the Official Catholic Directory (OCD). The contributions of women religious in the United States continue to be evident today in Catholic institutions of education and healthcare across the country, but there are, and have been, countless other contributions as well. Over the years, these valiant women have adapted to changing circumstances and forged ahead despite challenges to their way of life and ministry. The U.S. Catholic Church is indebted to the ministerial efforts and sacrifices made by women religious in the past and present.

This CARA Special Report is an effort to disentangle the story of women religious in the United States that is hidden in the numbers. Past studies that have presented the overall population of Catholic sisters in the United States have focused on the rapid decline that the total numbers revealed, but such studies did not provide the more nuanced narrative of what decline meant for the individual religious institute. How, for example, did religious institutes respond to declining membership? The data reveal not one response, but many quite varied responses. Some institutes responded by reorganizing internal structures, while others responded by merging with other religious institutes. In the face of diminishment, women religious have innovated by responding with new models when old models proved ineffective.

What gets lost in the discussion of the overall decline of women religious are the stories of institutes that have not followed the prevailing trend. Religious institutes experiencing growth, for instance, were virtually unaccounted for in past studies. Since any growth in vocations did not surpass the number needed for replacement, many institutes were assumed to have no new members. While new vocations to religious life are not abundant at this time, it is important to recognize that women continue to be called to this way of life. Although the numbers overall continue to decline, this Special Report presents signs of life that are hidden in those numbers.

Ursuline sisters and students, St. Peter's Mission, Montana, 1892

In focusing on the religious institutes of women themselves, this study responds to gaps in past studies of religious sisters by presenting the more particular stories of religious institutes in the face of general diminishment. How did these religious women organize in the midst of decline? How do international institutes of women religious respond to the changing landscape in the United States?

This report provides a snapshot of some notable phenomena occurring in U.S. religious institutes of women. The religious institutes discussed in the report were selected by examining trends in the collected data. Analyzing the data allowed CARA researchers to investigate why some institutes declined at a lower rate than others. Why did some institutes of women religious defy the general trend over time, while others closely followed it?

TOTAL NUMBERS OF WOMEN RELIGIOUS IN THE UNITED STATES

CARA compiled OCD data on membership for each religious institute by decade, beginning with entries reported in 1970 up to reported numbers for the most recent decade (see Appendix for an in-depth discussion of research methodology). The goal of the study was to reveal more nuanced trends of growth and decline among Catholic sisters in the United States over the past 50 years by focusing on the patterns in particular religious institutes themselves. The study also presents a few institutes that have women entering formation at a rate that allows them to grow. This growth is easier to observe for smaller, newer institutes than it is for the larger, more established institutes that are losing many older members who entered religious life decades ago.

Overall: Sisters in the United States

The overall change in the population of women religious in the United States over the past 50 years is one of dramatic decline. This decline has been well documented. The numbers show that the overall population of women religious in the United States grew rapidly over the course of the twentieth century and reached its peak in 1965 with 181,421 sisters.[1] Today, the total number of women religious in the United States has fallen below 50,000, representing a 72.5 percent decline from the peak total in 1965. There are about as many women religious in the United States now as there were a hundred years ago.

While many have lamented the decline and some have speculated as to its causes and implications, few have actually examined the trend lines for the individual institutes of women religious as this study does. A number of stories in the popular press have made the claim that the more traditionalist institutes (e.g., those wearing a full traditional habit) are growing, while those institutes that do not wear a traditional habit are declining. However, as Johnson, Wittberg, and Gautier report "The reality of the situation is that an almost equal percentage of LCWR [Leadership Conference of Women Religious] and CMSWR [Conference of Major Superiors of Women Religious] institutes have no one at all in formation at the present time (32 percent and 27 percent, respectively). One of the most striking findings regarding new entrants is that almost equal numbers of women have been attracted to institutes in both conferences in recent years." (pp. 20-21). The reality that these OCD data disclose is that nine in ten institutes follow the trend line shown above while one in ten have defied that trend (see Appendix).

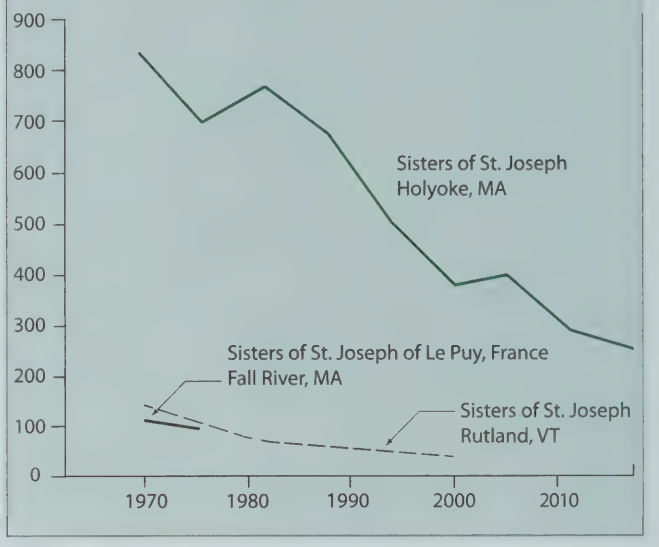
The largest religious institute of women in the United States remains the Sisters of Mercy of the Americas, with almost 3,400 members in 2014. In 1970, the OCD listed nearly 13,000 Sisters of Mercy. This institute was founded in 1991, when nine provinces and 16 congregations of Sisters of Mercy came together. These 25 later consolidated into five U.S. and one Latin American province. This institute illustrates the general pattern of decline and merger found in most institutes. Mergers such as this require hard work, but they are done for the sake of new life. The institute counts 25 women in formation at this time.

Factors Affecting the Overall Trend of Decline

The 2009 NRVC/CARA Recent Vocations to Religious Life study found that there are more Catholic sisters in the United States over age 90 than under age 60! This concentration of elderly sisters, which characterizes nearly all religious institutes, is perhaps the single greatest challenge to attracting new vocations. While many religious institutes of women continue to receive new members, these new vocations tend to be older, on average, than new members entering religious institutes of men. About a third of religious institutes of women have no one in formation and, among those that do, half have only one or two in formation.

Another factor that is perhaps slowing the rate of decline among women religious in recent years is an increase in vocations of women from diverse ethnic backgrounds and from countries outside the United States. New research by CARA for NRVC, entitled Incorporating Cultural Diversity in Religious Life, finds that while nine in ten perpetually professed members of religious institutes of women are Caucasian/Anglo, four in ten of those who entered in the last ten years are of another race or ethnicity. More than half of these institutes of women religious say that at least one entrant in the past ten years was born outside the United States. Many U.S. based institutes of women religious, such as the Sisters of Mercy of the Americas described above, include members from outside the United States in their member counts. In many cases, the numbers provided to the OCD by religious institutes include the members of the institute who are serving abroad.

Explaining Sharp Declines



A few religious institutes of women stood out in the data, displaying rapid rates of decline over a short period of time. An investigation of these institutes reveals that these sharp declines in membership occurred shortly after the Second Vatican Council (1962–1965), which coincided with a period of turmoil and rapid social change in the United States. The Council had called for aggiornamento—or bringing up to date, which left religious orders with the task of determining what updating might mean for their particular institute. Renewal proved especially difficult, however, because the Council had, at the same time, called for what was termed ressourcement—or a renewal through a return to the sources. For many, looking back to their initial foundation and charism suggested ways to read the "signs of the times," which facilitated renewal of their institutes. For others, debates ensued which caused irreconcilable divisions. Some sisters responded to these divisions by breaking from their institute in order to found new religious institutes, while others sought dispensation from their vows altogether.

A well-known example of mass exodus is found in The California Institute of the Sisters of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary. In the period following Vatican II, these women determined the practical aggiornamento needed for their Los Angeles based institute. Cardinal McIntyre, Archbishop of Los Angeles, vehemently disagreed with a number of changes in their institute and barred the sisters from teaching in diocesan schools when they refused to comply with his wishes. The confrontation with Cardinal McIntyre caused a rift within the religious institute, with some members desiring to comply while the vast majority maintained that these changes were needed.

The Vatican commission sent to investigate the dispute concluded the investigation with a compromise, which allowed the community to split temporarily and continue their discussions. At the time, 50 sisters remained in the original institute. Unable to reach an agreement, the other 300 plus members of the institute sought dispensation from their canonical vows in favor of a lay movement called the Immaculate Heart Community. Time magazine called them "rebels," but they saw themselves as grappling with Vatican II's call for aggiornamento.

Internal Reorganization of Religious Institutes

The CARA examination of data reported to the OCD revealed a number of interesting findings about religious institutes of women that did not follow the general trend of rapid and increasing rate of decline. A number of religious institutes stood out in the data by evidencing a slowing rate of decline since 2000. When these communities with slowing rates of diminishment were investigated further, a number of them were found to have absorbed smaller communities (or institutes with a much faster rate of population decrease) thereby accounting for the slowing decline in the base community.

The Sisters of St. Joseph of Springfield (MA) is one helpful example. In the mid 1970s, a first merger with the Sisters of St. Joseph of Springfield took place when the Sisters of St. Joseph of Fall River joined the community. In 1974, just before the merger, the Fall River institute numbered 99 sisters. In 2001, the Sisters of St. Joseph of Rutland, Vermont, also merged with the Sisters of St. Joseph of Springfield. The figures can be seen on the graph.

These two mergers with the Springfield community help explain the increase in the numbers for the community in 1974 and 2001. It is not that the Sisters of St. Joseph of Springfield exhibited a sudden increase in new vocations, but rather these two mergers account for the upswing. In such cases, the apparent slowing rate of decline is not related to an increase of new vocations; instead, it is these mergers that account for the increases in membership.

Other larger institutes have reorganized internally, or are in the process of reorganizing, by reshaping their province jurisdictions. In some cases, this entails returning to an organizational model once employed in their earlier history. Such religious institutes deal with decline in members internally, rather than through merger with another religious institute. In the past, a rapidly growing institute would have responded to increased numbers by creating new provinces in order to better administer their religious community. Today, faced with a corresponding rapid decline, such an institute might consolidate provinces to form fewer, larger provinces and do away with replicated administrative offices across the country. By responding in this internal manner, a religious institute might avoid the challenges of merging with another institute that may not share its charism and traditions. The Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul, for example, were founded as the Sisters of Charity of St. Joseph at Emmitsburg, Maryland in 1809 and divided into two provinces in 1910 (the St. Louis Province and the Eastern Province). In 1960, those two provinces reported more than 2,500 total members. In just a short time (ca. 1969), the organizational structure for the institute swelled to five U.S. provinces to respond to growth in numbers of sisters. In 2011, however, the St. Louise Province was established, which joined together four of the five provinces and thereby returned to the previous organizational model of the institute. Today, the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul list 670 members serving in the United States.

Mergers of Religious Institutes

The formation of "new" religious institutes, amalgamated from smaller communities of women, is a common trend among religious institutes faced with declining numbers. This reorganization of communities explains why a number of religious institutes cease to exist while other institutes, often larger than 500 members, have suddenly appeared in more recent years. It is not that communities have vanished, but simply that they are to be found under new designations.

The Sisters of St. Francis of the Neumann Communities, for example, is the result of a merger of five communities beginning in 2004. The five communities varied in size from 30 to 335 members. After the merger, the new Sisters of St. Francis of the Neumann Communities numbered 528 members in 2010.

Many institutes of women religious will reorganize or merge institutes as numbers continue to decline. Recently, the Union of Sisters of Our Lady of Charity celebrated their reunification with the Religious of the Good Shepherd. The amalgamation of these two institutes represents an international merger, bringing together traditions and resources under a shared charism. Transition marks the experience of many sisters, as they work to negotiate their past with hopes for the future.

Today, there are fewer religious institutes of women based in the United States than there were in the 1970s, but determining an accurate number of institutes for any given year is really a matter of definition. In one accounting, a number for religious communities could include the number of provinces of a single religious institute. Such a count would grossly overestimate the number of total institutes but would account for the changes in internal structures. Another accounting could exclude the individual provinces but this would grossly underestimate some religious communities with distinct administrative units.

Vocational Growth in Communities

Although the overall trend among religious institutes today suggests general decline, some institutes with established histories continue to experience vocational growth. The Dominican Sisters of the Congregation of St. Cecilia (also known as the Nashville Dominicans) is one such example. Following a slight decline between 1970 and 1980, the Congregation of St. Cecilia has since grown steadily. The institute has experienced its most rapid growth in the period since 2000, with a 76 percent change. Today, the community numbers just over 300 members. Growth, not decline, captures this institute's trajectory.

Emerging Communities: the early 1970s

The CARA study of Emerging Communities of Consecrated Life revealed that a number of communities, many of which were founded in the 1970s, displayed a period of initial success followed by the more common pattern of decline. These religious institutes, inspired by the Second Vatican Council, placed themselves at the service of the Church with a renewed commitment to the poor.

The Sisters of St. Joseph the Worker, for example, were founded in 1973 in the Diocese of Covington, Kentucky, by sisters from the Sisters of Charity of Nazareth. They began with 18 professed sisters and experienced growth in the early years of their foundation. Their apostolic life was dedicated to the care of the elderly and the education of children at their academy in Walton, Kentucky. By 1990, the community numbered 23 sisters; representing a growth of 27 percent since 1973. The years following, however, returned the Sisters of St. Joseph the Worker to a size comparable to that of their initial foundation. Today, the community numbers 12 members.

Still other religious institutes of women that emerged in the 1970s experience consistent growth even today. These communities do not exhibit the growth-followed-by-decline pattern and seem to point to even further expansion into the foreseeable future. Established in 1973 with only nine members, the Religious Sisters of Mercy of Alma, Michigan serve as such an example of ongoing growth. If this rate of growth continues, the community will approach 100 members by the end of the decade.

CARA's analysis of the OCD data identified six religious institutes of women that have doubled their membership between 1970 and 2013. Some of these units are cited in anecdotes and news reports as evidence of a reversal in this overall trend of diminishment. However, all six institutes together have increased their net membership by only 267 members since 1970, too few to have an effect on the overall picture. Whatever these insitutes have done or are doing is unlikely to offset losses in the tens of thousands elsewhere. It is simply not enough.

International Institutes

Many religious institutes of women in the United States are part of an international order. The U.S. provinces of these communities therefore do not provide the full picture. In some cases, the U.S. branch of the institute represents just a small delegation of the international order and might furthermore be housed by members who are born and formed abroad. Decline for these communities inevitably means an honest appraisal of the situation in the United States and a response situated in a global context. At times such an appraisal will lead to the withdrawal of members serving in the United States to a ministry deemed to be in greater need of support internationally. Other communities might respond to aging and decline of membership in the United States by sending more sisters from another part of the world. An international religious institute might, for example, send sisters from their congregation in India to minister in the United States, where apostolates may continue to thrive but whose membership is low.

Return to International Foundations

The Irish Ursulines of Blackrock, having a prominent history of missionary work, established a new mission in the United States in the 1960s with a small delegation of women. The sisters arrived in Georgia, ministering in the Diocese of Savannah until they approached the age of retirement. Vocations do not appear to have boomed in their mission territory, since the numbers of sisters in the U.S. delegation remained relatively consistent over the reported years. The remaining sisters in the United States (four in number) returned to Ireland in 1997, rejoining the larger contingent of women from their religious institute. This decision marked the cessation of direct missionary activity in the United States. Advanced age (and likely declining numbers in Ireland) influenced the decision of this institute to return to their home foundation.

Vocational Strength from the Missions

Another notable phenomenon is found in the Sisters of Charity of Seton Hill (Greensburg, Pennsylvania). Originally established in the United States in 1870 with only three sisters and two novices from the Sisters of Charity of Cincinnati community, the Sisters of Charity of Seton Hill enjoyed vocational success in the Diocese of Pittsburgh. Only 19 years after the first sisters moved to the Pittsburgh area, the Seton Hill sisters were staffing 20 parochial schools as well as their own flagship schools, Saint Mary School for Boys and Saint Joseph Academy for Girls.[2] By 1960, the Sisters of Charity of Seton Hill numbered 741 sisters in the United States. That same year, the institute set their eyes on the missions by electing to send four sisters to South Korea at the invitation of a bishop.

Lost in the presentation of raw figures of total sisters for this religious institute, however, is the overwhelming growth experienced in the international mission. The rate of decline of this religious institute has been slowed by the continuing vocational vitality in South Korea. In one way, the number of sisters reported by the Sisters of Charity of Seton Hill inflates the number found in the U.S. community. For many OCD entries, the Sisters of Charity of Seton Hill did not distinguish the South Korean sisters from the U.S. based sisters, but rather provided only a total number of sisters in the religious institute. However, the example proves useful in drawing attention to the rapid growth of international sisters for this community.

The original U.S. foundation has experienced a steady decline similar to other religious institutes of its size. Today, more than half of the sisters belonging to the Sisters of Charity of Seton Hill are ministering in South Korea. In the case of the Sisters of Charity of Seton Hill, therefore, the mission territory experienced a more robust growth in vocations than its original U.S. foundation. The story of vocational strength of this religious institute has flipped. While several of the members of the Korean Province of the Sisters of Charity of Seton Hill are U.S. born, most of the sisters serving in Korea are native to that country. Perhaps one day, the United States will itself become the mission territory of this religious institute with sisters coming from South Korea to minister here.

Defunct/Extinct Institutes

For a number of institutes, data were only available for the 1970 reporting cycle. Trying to account for these institutes that did not appear in later editions of the OCD led CARA researchers to consider the possibility of defunct communities. With the likelihood of mergers ruled out by unique foundations, CARA looked for the historical trajectory of these unamalgamated diocesan communities.

The Society of Christ Our King, for example, began in 1931 in the Diocese of Raleigh and moved to Danville, Virginia, in 1938. Under the guidance of a Carmelite nun from Philadelphia, the community established itself in social outreach at local parishes. Gaining national attention in 1951 for their Hattie Carnegie-designed habit, Time magazine praised the hard-working sisters for their modern dress. The early 1960s presented a further refinement in apostolic outreach for the sisters. With civil rights demonstrations mounting in the area and instruction from the local bishop to refrain from public demonstration, the sisters opted to provide hospitality to demonstrators at their convent (Moore 2006). There are conflicting accounts as to why the community was eventually disbanded, but one author suggests the possibility that the Society of Christ Our King had never gained canonical recognition as a religious institute (Fogarty 2001). Never growing beyond ten members, the Society of Christ Our King dissolved in the early 1970s.

Conclusions and Future Research

The unique contribution of this CARA study of population trends among religious institutes of women is the creation of a database of the population of sisters in the United States by religious institute since 1970. Although not all religious institutes of women reported figures for each year, the available data are a rich resource for historians and sociologists of religion alike. This study demonstrates the shortcomings of looking only at the overall population trend over the last 50 years. The full narrative of religious institutes of women cannot rely on generalizations, but requires nuance. Decline alone does not capture the full picture. The narratives here display some of the richness to be found in the data. Further research should explore the different patterns exhibited by religious institutes of men as well as a broader exploration of these trends regionally around the world.

Appendix: Research Methodology and Resources

For this analysis, CARA compiled data on the total number of sisters reported to the OCD by each institute of women religious in 1970, 1980, 1990, 2000, 2010, and 2014 (the most recent edition available at the time of data collection). To compare growth or decline over time, CARA calculated the slope of the trend line for all institutes with data across all six years. A positive slope indicates overall growth between 1970 and 2014, while a negative slope indicates overall decline across that same period. Of the 492 units for which a slope could be calculated, 444 showed a negative slope and 48 showed a positive slope.

Regarding the number of total sisters in the United States, researchers will notice an incongruence in the OCD between the figures reported by the religious institutes and the "General Summary" figures reported by dioceses. The data reported in the "Religious Institutes of Women" section of the OCD appears to be independent of the summary data reported by the dioceses of the United States. The contrast in summary figures might be explained largely by the fact that some religious institutes included international sisters in their reporting. Diocesan summaries included only those sisters living within a respective diocese for a given year.

In Marvels of Charity: History of American Sisters and Nuns (1994), George C. Stewart presents a detailed history of Catholic sisters in the United States drawing on OCD numbers for the twentieth century. In the Appendix of his work, Stewart notes this inconsistency in self-reporting by religious institutes. Rather than dismissing the inflated numbers due to the inclusion of international members, in his final analysis he relies on a questionnaire to a number of religious institutes that confirms the self-reported figures. Consequently, his numbers for the self-reported totals of sisters remained consistently higher than the totals represented in the General Summary.

Facing the same discrepancy, CARA concluded that some religious institutes were indeed providing figures that included their sisters worldwide. Entries in the OCD for some institutes noted "Total in Congregation" or "Sisters Worldwide," but did not provide a separate number for their U.S. membership. Other institutes listed figures for their "Generalate" or "General Motherhouse" located in another country, but did not report figures for their U.S. based "Motherhouse." Since the CARA study was interested in patterns for religious institutes in the U.S., those institutes clearly including international figures were flagged, to note a change in the database. The process of cleaning data for international counts allowed the totals to approach those figures reported in the General Summary.

The inconsistent reporting of data by religious institutes of women complicated the process of data entry. A number of institutes did not provide any figures whatsoever over the 50-year span. These institutes are recorded in the database, but only indicate address, year of foundation for the U.S. institute, and whether the institute is pontifical or diocesan. Data errors in the OCD were also discovered. At times, CARA researchers imputed a figure using the average of the most reliable years for that institute. For example, if a 1980 entry was found to be inconsistent with the 1970 and 1990 entries, the average from 1979 and 1981 was used.

To account for institutes that simply listed figures for "Sisters" or "Total in Community" but did not distinguish between professed and non-professed, CARA chose to include in its count for each institute those members listed in formation when the number was available. Those listed in formation included sisters in temporary profession, junior sisters, scholastics, postulants, novices, and candidates. Excluded from data entry were figures for lay associates or "Associate Members."

In some cases, identifying the religious institutes of women to highlight in this report resulted from anomalous data trends, such as religious institutes that did not follow the general pattern observed in other communities. Alerted by such divergence, CARA researchers discovered the unusual patterns described in this Special Report. Researching an institute's history enabled CARA to fill in the narrative hidden in the numbers and to identify orders that disappeared in later editions of the OCD.

Preparing this report also required gathering data for years outside the scope of the original project design. When, for example, a religious institute was discovered to have undergone a merger in its history, data from the year of the merger was drawn from the OCD. This resulted in CARA researchers undertaking a second phase of data entry to better grasp the story. In many cases, the 1960 figures for a religious institute aided researchers in verifying that 1970 data were consistent.

2014 Year in Review

BY CAROL ZIMMERMANN

Throughout the year, Pope Francis spoke of the role parishes and families have in bringing others to Christ. He said parishes should be like "field hospitals" ministering to those in need.

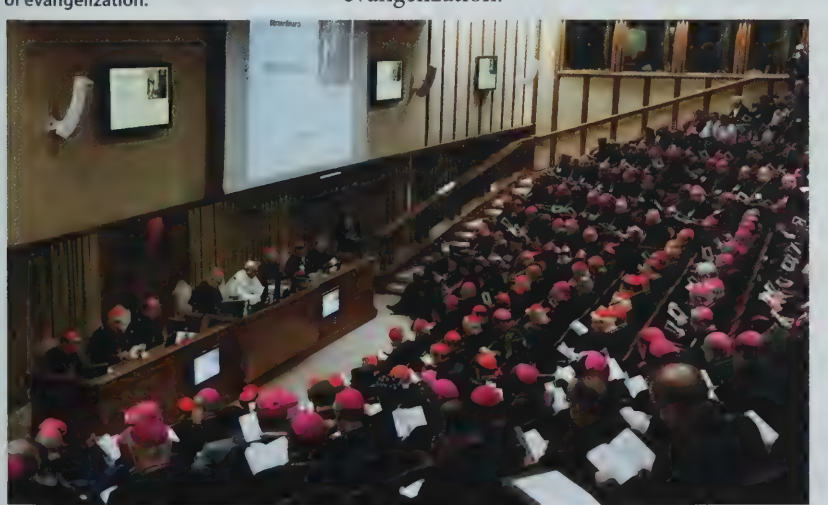
The U.S. Catholic Church in 2014 took much of its cue from Pope Francis, who in the second year of his pontificate had still "taken the world by storm," according to Archbishop Joseph E. Kurtz of Louisville, Kentucky, president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops.

The pontiff was not only on magazine covers, he also was the focus of a number of books, the subject of symposiums at Catholic universities and very likely the topic of many a conversation at coffee and doughnut socials after Masses in parish halls across the country.

As Archbishop Kurtz noted, the pope had worldwide attention for almost everything he said and did which "in so many ways," made the U.S. bishops' work that much easier.

In other words, the pope had our attention. His message wasn't hard to understand either.

At a panel discussion about the "Francis effect" last year at Georgetown University, Kerry Robinson, executive director of the National Leadership Roundtable on Church Management, said the pope's strongest action so far had been urging people to personal conversion.



The conversion he seeks in the world "starts now, with us," she said.

Throughout the year, Pope Francis spoke of the role parishes and families have in bringing others to Christ. He said parishes should be like "field hospitals" ministering to those in need and he also emphasized the key role that families play, not only in their care for one another, but in evangelizing.

A Focus on Faith, Families and Religious Freedom

The family was a key focus for the church in 2014 particularly with the extraordinary Synod of Bishops on the family at the Vatican which brought together the presidents of national bishops' conferences, heads of Eastern Catholic churches and Vatican officials. The event took place over a period of 15 days in October but it involved months of preparation that included gathering input from Catholics around the world.

The point of the synod was to discuss "pastoral challenges to the family in the context of evangelization."

A session of the Synod of Bishops on the family held at the Vatican. Presidents of national bishops' conferences, heads of Eastern Catholic churches and Vatican officials attended to discuss "pastoral challenges to the family in the context of evangelization."

In planning this gathering, the Vatican sent bishops' conferences a 39-item questionnaire with questions about Catholic teachings on marriage and the family and cultural and social challenges to those teachings. It asked about divorce, remarriage, cohabitation, same-sex unions and contraception.

Some U.S. dioceses provided online links for Catholics to participate in the survey while in other dioceses, bishops solicited responses from pastors, pastoral councils and advisory boards.

Philadelphia Archbishop Charles J. Chaput, O.F.M. Cap. emphasized that the questionnaire was not a poll on church teaching but a unique opportunity to "reflect and respond thoughtfully on serious challenges to family life and to marriage."

At the U.S. bishops' spring general assembly June 11-13 in New Orleans, Archbishop Kurtz said the overall trend in comments from U.S. participants showed a desire to hear a clearer explanation of church teaching about marriage and families. He also said many parents indicated that they are "at a loss" on how to transmit the faith to their children and they also face challenges from today's economy, busy schedules and from living in a culture that they've described as being "hostile" to their faith.

Alice and Jim Heinzen, a couple from the Diocese of La Crosse, Wisconsin, were among the laity who attended the synod as auditors and also spoke at the gathering. In their presentation they said the existing diocesan programs and Catholic organizations aimed at helping Catholic families were not strong enough to meet modern needs.

"We must develop more robust and creative methods to share the fundamental truth that marriage is a divine gift from God, rather than merely a man-made institution," Alice Heinzen. The director of the diocesan Office for Marriage and Family Life, addressed the synod Oct. 7, reading a speech she wrote with her husband Jeff, president of McDonell Catholic Schools in Chippewa Falls.

She noted that the church is not confused or in a state of crisis about its teaching on marriage and family life, but she said there is "a crisis of methodology. How do we as a church effectively share what we know to be true in practical, simple and convincing ways, so that all men and women are challenged and supported to live lifelong marriages and build homes that reflect the domestic church?"

This point and several others about the challenges Catholics face in their daily lives provided food for thought for the church leaders who were not expected to make any formal proposals about the church's pastoral care of families until after a second, larger gathering at the Vatican in 2015.

The synod was not the only time this year Catholic leaders and laity discussed marriage and family life. These topics were front and center in the U.S. public square amid debates about same-sex marriage and the new federal health care laws requiring employers, even religious ones, to cover the costs of their employees' artificial birth control, sterilization and abortion-causing drugs, even if employers are morally opposed to such coverage.

In 2014 the number of states recognizing same-sex marriage nearly doubled over the previous year. By the year's end, same-sex marriage was legal in 35 states and the District of Columbia. "The challenges to religious liberty with regard to the redefinition of marriage grow daily," Archbishop Salvatore J. Cordileone of San Francisco told the U.S. bishops gathered in Baltimore for their annual fall general assembly in November.

The archbishop, who is chairman of the Subcommittee for the Promotion and Defense of Marriage, urged fellow bishops not to "shy away" from reiterating the Catholic Church's teaching upholding marriage as between one man and one woman.

At that same meeting, Baltimore Archbishop William E. Lori, chairman of the U.S. bishops' Ad Hoc Committee for Religious Liberty, stressed that there are old and new challenges in the church's efforts to defend religious liberty.

He said the committee will continue to monitor the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' contraceptive mandate that is part of the Affordable Care Act and is also looking at laws that redefine marriage and tracking new proposed legislation requiring health insurance coverage of abortion.

In June, the Supreme Court ruled that Hobby Lobby and Conestoga Wood Specialties need not comply with the contraceptive mandate which the for-profit companies' owners objected to on moral grounds, saying it violated their religious rights.

"Religious liberty continues to be of great concern to us all," said Archbishop William E. Lori. "We approach this as people of faith, as spiritual leaders who love our church, who love our people, who love our country."

Archbishop Charles J. Chaput of Philadelphia in front of the official image for the World Meeting of Families being held in Philadelphia in 2015. It was later announced Pope Francis will attend an event being held at the Meeting during his papal visit to the U.S.

Catholics were also on the front lines and public squares during the year speaking up for immigration reform, looking for ways to reduce poverty and to end the death penalty.

"Religious liberty continues to be of great concern to us all," Archbishop Lori told the bishops, adding that it might seem that the struggle is a "daunting task."

"We approach this as people of faith, as spiritual leaders who love our church, who love our people, who love our country," he said.

Across the United States this summer Catholics gathered to show their prayerful support to this effort by taking part in Fortnight for Freedom observances that concluded on July 4th. The event, in its third year, is described as a way to celebrate religious freedom and grow in awareness of efforts the Catholic Church sees as threats to that freedom.

Mary Sturm, a parishioner of St. Gregory Parish in Fort Lauderdale, Florida said participating in the annual observance "is almost like a catechesis, as well as social advocacy, but it is also faith formation. People have to be taught about what is going on."

In the Chicago Archdiocese, a Mass and Eucharistic procession through downtown Chicago June 25 marked the fortnight celebration and participants also prayed a rosary for religious freedom before the Blessed Sacrament.

In his column in the archdiocesan newspaper the Catholic New World, the late Chicago Cardinal Francis E. George, O.M.I. wrote: "In this country, we do not fear being killed for our faith. What, then, are we afraid of? We are afraid that the institutions that perform the works of mercy that have been integral to the church's mission for centuries will be forced to become, effectively, government institutions, given permission to exist only if they do not act as Catholic.

"At stake also is a society that once permitted many different voices and faiths to contribute to the common good without compromising their collective conscience."

Religious freedom was also a topic of conversation when Pope Francis and President Barack Obama had their first meeting March 27 at the Vatican. The two men talked for nearly an hour and also discussed medical ethics, immigration reform and the need to end human trafficking.

In a lighter moment while they were exchanging gifts, Obama told the pope he would show him the White House garden if he paid a visit.

"I invited and urged him to come to the United States, telling him that people would be overjoyed to see him," Obama said later.

At the time of that meeting, organizers of the September 2015 World Meeting of Families had been expressing hopes that Pope Francis would attend the event, which could be the occasion for a state visit to the U.S. Months later, plans for the papal visit to the United States were made public revealing that the pope would visit Washington, New York and Philadelphia.

Plans were already in full motion in 2014 for the World Meeting of Families in Philadelphia. These plans only intensified with the announcement that the pope would attend the group's Festival of Families Sept. 26 – a cultural celebration expected to draw up to 800,000 participants – and the pope would celebrate Sunday Mass the next day for a crowd of at least 1 million people.

Eustace Mita, a member of the World Meeting of Families' board of directors, said the pope's visit will make an impact and will be felt for decades in the Philadelphia region. "He truly is the pope of unity, bringing Catholics and non-Catholics together," she said.

As Catholics made plans to attend this event, many seemed undaunted by the huge crowds they would be joining. In part, that may be because they are used to publicly expressing their faith and are not afraid to do so.

Thousands of Catholics brave cold temperatures in January each year to attend the rally and March for Life in Washington. This year was no exception – even with 8 degree temperatures–thousands huddled on the National Mall and marched to the U.S. Supreme Court. Speakers highlighted the tenacious determination of the crowd and likened their bravery to the firm resolve they'd shown in their efforts to change abortion laws and promote a culture of life in the U.S.

Tens of thousands of people also took part in the Walk for Life West Coast in San Francisco and others attended rallies or marches in various U.S. cities to take a stance against abortion on the anniversary of the Supreme Court decision that legalized abortion.

Catholics were also on the front lines and public squares during the year speaking up for immigration reform, looking for ways to reduce poverty and to end the death penalty.

They gathered for prayer and rallies for peace after the rioting in Ferguson, Missouri and to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 which Archbishop Kurtz praised as a "monumental step forward" but added that there is "still much work to do."

"The act itself did not eradicate racial discrimination and injustice. In fact, there are reminders across our nation today that the embers of racial discrimination still smolder," he said in a Sept. 9 statement.

Similarly, retired Bishop John H. Ricard, S.S.J. of Pensacola-Tallahassee, Florida, president of the National Black Catholic Congress and rector of St. Joseph's Seminary in Washington, spoke of the need to do more.

The bishop noted that many church leaders had been at the forefront in integrating schools and fighting against racial discrimination before the civil rights legislation passed because they viewed segregation as "incongruous to what it means to be Christian." And today, he said the "church in many ways is still a leader" in these efforts.

Papal Canonizations

That sense of working together, or at least being together as members of the universal church, was evident in the estimated crowd of 800,000 people on the streets of Rome April 27 to see two popes, Pope Francis and retired Pope Benedict XVI, concelebrate the Mass honoring the canonization of two of their predecessors, Sts. John Paul II and John XXIII.

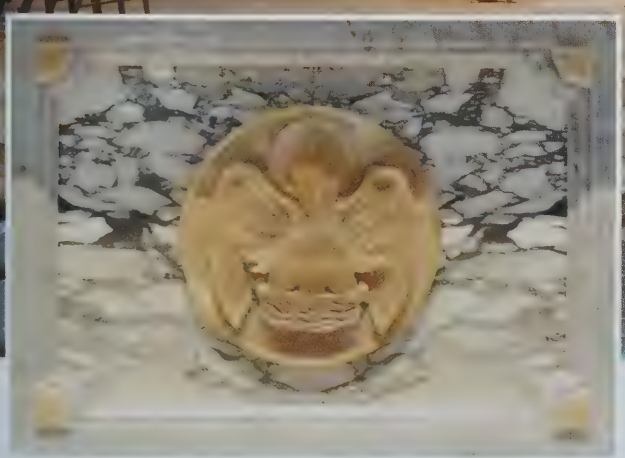
Lino Rulli, host of "The Catholic Guy" which airs on the satellite radio Catholic Channel, led a group of American pilgrims the day of the canonization and urged them to get as close as possible to St. Peter's Square.

View of St. Peter's Square at the Vatican during the canonization mass for Sts. John XXIII and John Paul II. An estimated crowd of 800,000 people attended the Mass for the newly sainted former pontiffs.

He said the huge turnout was a great sign that "so many people want to go to church, that people are willing to wait 12 hours to go to Mass." It's almost like "the harder you make things for people, the more they are drawn to religion," he added.

In his homily during the canonization ceremony, Pope Francis praised the new Sts. John XXIII and John Paul II as men of courage and mercy, who responded to challenges of their time by modernizing the Catholic Church in fidelity to its ancient traditions.

He described St. John Paul as the "pope of the family," and said he was sure St. John Paul was guiding the church on its path to the upcoming synods of bishops on the family.



Pope Francis invoked the help of the two new papal saints for the synods' success, and he prayed, "May both of them teach us not to be scandalized by the wounds of Christ and to enter ever more deeply into the mystery of divine mercy, which always hopes and always forgives, because it always loves."

A USER'S GUIDE TO THE OFFICIAL CATHOLIC DIRECTORY®

Each year the editors of The Official Catholic Directory® seek added ways of serving their subscribers. Although the book may never answer every question, this is the conscientious goal; its format, arrangement and editorial features are directed toward the convenience and needs of the public. Comments and suggestions are welcome. For the benefit of the subscriber and a more efficient use of The Official Catholic Directory® and its cross references, a summary of the contents and their meaning follows:

The Official Catholic Directory® Glossary
A listing of some of the ecclesiastical terms and organizations found in the Directory.

The Governing Bodies in Vatican City
A chronological table of the Supreme Roman Pontiffs; the Pope, and an alphabetical list of the College of Cardinals; the duties of each of the agencies of the Roman Curia, and other commissions and institutions associated with the Holy See, along with their officers; a list of the Seminaries and National Colleges in Rome; the Apostolic Nunciature and the Permanent Observer Mission to the United Nations, with their staff. As foreign organizations, these entities are not included in the USCCB group tax exemption ruling ("Group Ruling").

The Catholic Church in the United States (Provinces)
The archdioceses and dioceses of the United States arranged under the provinces to which they belong, listed with their active archbishops and bishops.

Ecclesiastical forms of address recognized in the United States. Formal forms of address for correspondence with the clergy in the United States.

U.S. Cardinals, Archbishops, Bishops, Archabbots and Abbots
An alphabetical list of Cardinals, Archbishops, Bishops, Archabbots and Abbots, arranged within their specific title. Also listed is their address and status, followed by a hierarchical/chronological list by year.

United States Conference of Catholic Bishops
The United States Conference of Catholic Bishops is a permanent institute composed of Catholic bishops of the United States of America in and through which the bishops exercise in a communal or collegial manner the pastoral mission entrusted to them by the Lord Jesus of sanctification, teaching, and leadership, especially by devising forms and methods of the apostolate suitably adapted to the circumstances of the times. Such exercise is intended to offer appropriate assistance to each bishop in fulfilling his particular ministry in the local Church, to effect a commonality of ministry addressed to the people of the United States of America, and to foster and express communion with the Church in other nations within the Church universal, under the leadership of its chief pastor, the Pope.

Alphabetical Places List
The cities, towns, and villages where there is a church with a resident priest, or a Catholic institution, or both, together with the abbreviations of the archdiocese or diocese to which it belongs.

Dioceses and Archdioceses (in alphabetical sequence)
The most detailed information on the Catholic Church in the United States, including the Military Services, Eastern Churches, Personal Prelatures, and Apostolates to the Hungarians and Lithuanians. Listings are in alphabetical order according to the name of the diocese/archdiocese and include the diocesan curia and administrative offices; a parish-by-parish listing of clergy, churches, missions, and parochial schools; information on institutions, and the religious institutes of men and women located in the diocese/archdiocese; and a statistical profile for each diocese/archdiocese.

United States Territorial Sees
This section contains information on U.S. territories similar to that found in the preceding section.

American Foreign Missions
This section highlights the Religious working specifically in foreign countries. Each Province lists their U.S. members and the countries they serve in. For specific address requests, contact the mission office listed.

Missionary Activities
Organizations involved in missionary work in the U.S. and foreign countries.

United States Conference of Secular Institutes
An alphabetical list of secular organizations and their purposes.

U.S. Catholic Mission Association
An alphabetical list of countries served by the U.S. Catholic Mission Association, detailing the number and religious order or laity personnel working there.

Mission Churches
A list, by city, of mission churches in the U.S. and the parishes to which they are attached.

Religious Institutes of Men and Women
An alphabetical list of religious institutes of men and of women, using a P.J. Kenedy identification number. Each listing contains the general headquarters, provinces, provincialates, a summary of legal titles and holdings taken from the individual archdioceses and dioceses within the Directory, various forms of ministry and works, statistical data of personnel, and representation in the U.S. dioceses and archdioceses. Foreign religious institutes are not included in the USCCB Group Ruling.

Special Care Facilities
An alphabetical list of special care facilities by state and diocese.

Religious Order Initials for Men and Religious Order Initials for Women
Indexes of abbreviations relevant to the religious institute name and the applicable identification number.

Diocesan and Religious Priests
An alphabetical list of diocesan and religious priests denoting their year of ordination, the archdiocese or diocese they are assigned to or work in, and the church or institution with which they are affiliated.

Necrology of U.S. Cardinals, Archbishops, Bishops, Archabbots, Abbots, and Priests
An alphabetical list of the U.S. hierarchy and priests who have died since the last issue of the Directory, along with their date of death and last assignment.

The General Summary
A 40+ page general summary of statistics arranged alphabetically by state, listing the archdiocese first within each state, followed by the dioceses. This information, extracted from the Statistical Overview of each diocese/archdiocese, pertains to personnel, parishes, health and welfare, education, and specific sacramental figures, as well as Catholic and total population figures for each diocese/archdiocese. U.S. territories and Eastern Church statistics are also included.

Map of Catholic Diocesan and Province Boundaries in the United States
Map defining the diocesan, archdiocesan, provincial, and state boundaries.

Products & Services Guide
Includes a diverse array of products and services offered to the Catholic community.

The Official Catholic Directory®
Provides a comprehensive listing of archdioceses and dioceses of the world. Also contains mid-year updates to the U.S. (arch)dioceses. More information on The Official Catholic Directory Part II can be obtained from the publisher.

SPECIAL NOTATIONS USED IN THE DIRECTORY

An asterisk (*) denotes a tax-exempt organization that has its own IRS exemption status and is not covered by the USCCB Group Ruling. The Group Ruling allows for the exemption from federal income tax of all Catholic institutions listed in The Official Catholic Directory® for that year. The exemption was established in 1946 and has been extended every year since then.

[CEM] in a parish listing indicates that a cemetery is connected to the parish.

[JC] indicates a joint cemetery, which is a cemetery being utilized by more than one parish. A number following [CEM] or [JC] indicates the number of cemeteries owned by the parish or joint cemeteries shared with other parishes.

A dagger † next to a name in the Necrology denotes a deceased priest. A Maltese cross ✠ denotes a deceased member of the hierarchy.

THE GENERAL SUMMARY

Certain terms used in the General Summary may need additional explanation.

Extern Priests are priests who have not been incardinated into the diocese in which they are currently working and residing.

Health Care Centers include ancillary care systems, medical centers, sanitoriums and hospices.

Specialized Homes refers to institutions which provide aid to abused children or adults, halfway homes, AIDS patients, ARC patients, ex-offenders, pregnant women, adjudicated delinquents, or runaway youths.

Special Centers for Social Services are institutions or services that provide assistance, such as hotline centers, food banks, homeless centers, legal aid services, or counseling services.

Residential Care of Children refers to orphanages, as opposed to day care centers.

Non-residential Schools for Handicapped are day schools which provide regular and religious education for physically and/or mentally handicapped students.

Received into Full Communion is used to describe people who have been baptized earlier in life and have now been received into full communion in the Catholic Church.

THE OFFICIAL CATHOLIC DIRECTORY GLOSSARY

Abbot
The superior of an autonomous community of men religious. He has general and sacramental jurisdiction over his community. The head of a prominent monastery or a congregation consisting of several monasteries is an archabbot.

Advocate
An ecclesiastical advocate is someone approved by Church authority to safeguard the rights of a party in a canonical process by arguments regarding the law and the facts of the case. [Cf. c. 1481 and CLSA Comm., p. 967]

Apostolate
Apostolate is the mission of Christ and participation in it. Its object is to bring Christ to others, its goal is the greater glory of God, its scope is universal. The work is carried out by every human agency by which the life of grace may be given or increased in the soul. A mandate from the Church is essential to the Catholic apostolate.

Archbishop
A bishop of a main or metropolitan diocese in an ecclesiastical province. The term is equivalent to metropolitan in the Western Church. It may also be granted to other ordinaries and non-residential bishops, and to the ordinary of a diocese outside a province.

Auditor
An official of a diocesan court, who gathers evidence and testimony and draws up a record of an ecclesiastical case.

Bishop
A bishop, by divine institution, carries on the work of the apostles. By reason of episcopal consecration, he shares in the triple apostolic function of teacher of doctrine, priest of sacred worship, and minister of church government. Bishops are responsible for the pastoral care of their dioceses. In addition, bishops have a responsibility to act in council to guide the Church. The term eparch is used in Eastern-rite churches.

The bishop to whom a particular or local church is entrusted is called a diocesan bishop or a residential bishop. Some other bishops receive Titular Sees over which they exercise no pastoral authority.
When the pastoral needs of a diocese or archdiocese warrant, an auxiliary bishop may be assigned to aid the residential bishop in governing his diocese. An auxiliary bishop is assigned when the residential bishop needs assistance in carrying out his duties because of ill health, advanced age, or amount of work. An auxiliary bishop does not have the right of succession within his diocese.

In special circumstances, such as the advanced age or ill health of a diocesan bishop, a coadjutator bishop may be appointed to assist the principal bishop of a diocese. Coadjutator bishops have the right of succession in the diocese of their appointment from the time the See becomes vacant upon the death or retirement of its bishop.

Brother
A man who is a member of a religious order, but is not ordained or studying for the priesthood.

Cana Conference
A Catholic family movement, originally designed to aid married couples and families in their spiritual and interpersonal relationships. The program is now divided into Pre-Cana, for couples engaged to be married, and Cana Conferences, programs for married people.

Catholic Fraternal Organizations
National Catholic fraternal organizations operating in the United States include the Knights of Columbus and the Knights of Peter Claver. These organizations are not included in the USCCB group tax exemption ruling.

Censor Librorum
A theologian empowered by a bishop to judge a book's soundness in regard to Church teaching before publication.

Chancellor
The office of the chancellor (or the chancery) evolved from the practice in the early Church of appointing an official to sign and preserve the letters of the bishop. The first function of the chancellor in the present day is gathering, arranging, and safeguarding the acts of the diocesan curia. Dispensations and other official documents also originate from the chancery. In many dioceses, the chancellor continues to exercise ordinary jurisdiction as delegated by the diocesan bishop. He or she may be assisted by a separate official, the vice-chancellor.

Chapter
The general chapter of a religious order is an assembly of elected or appointed members and provincials. General chapters are convened for the election of officers, amendments to the constitution, and discussion and legislation of matters of concern to members and the order as a whole.

A provincial chapter conducts elections and handles legislation on a provincial level. The assembly is comprised of superiors and representatives of the religious.
A chapter of canons is a group of diocesan priests, appointed by the bishop of a diocese, with assigned authority or responsibilities.

College of Cardinals
The College of Cardinals is made up of the cardinals of the Church, who advise the Pope, assist in the central administration of the Church, head the various curial offices and congregations, administer the Holy See during a vacancy, and elect a new Pope. There are three ranks in the College of Cardinals, corresponding to the historical origins of cardinals in the Roman Catholic Church. All cardinals are bishops, but their rank within the College of Cardinals is characterized by one of the hierarchical ranks of bishop, priest, or deacon. Cardinals are given honorary title to churches in the city of Rome. [CF. c. 350; CLSA Comm., pp. 288-289]

1. Cardinal Bishops
There are two types of Cardinal Bishops: 1) those appointed by the Pope as titular bishops to one of the six suburban dioceses of Rome, and 2) Eastern-rite Patriarchs who are heads of Sees with apostolic origins that have been assigned to the College of Cardinals.

2. Cardinal Priests
Heads of Sees outside the city of Rome are assigned a "titular church," one of the churches in Rome. They have no pastoral authority over their titular church.

3. Cardinal Deacons
Cardinals of diaconal rank are bishops without Sees who head the various departments, offices, congregations, committees, and the Secretariat of State of the Roman Curia.

Confraternity of Christian Doctrine [CCD]
A lay organization established for religious education throughout a person's entire life. The term is currently used to describe Catholic parish-based religious education of children from kindergarten through high school. At the diocesan level, the offices are now more commonly known as offices of religious education or Christian formation. Nationally, the confraternity's religious education component has been taken over by the USCCB's Department of Education. It still exists as a separate entity under the USCCB Administrative Board, with responsibility for licensing religious and spiritual literature.

Consolidated School
The term, as used in the Directory, may refer to a school that takes students from more than one parish, or a school that was formed by the consolidation of two or three other schools. In both cases, it is a means of keeping a Catholic school in a given area open by taking students from the surrounding areas, regardless of parish boundaries.

Convent
In common usage, the term refers to a house of women religious. Originally, it referred to a building where members of religious institutes lived, and was not restricted to communities of women.

Cursillo
The cursillo de cristianidad, or "little course in Christianity," is a three-day program for achieving spiritual renewal or spiritual awakening. It seeks to convey a new sense of individual and organized apostolic action. The program, conducted by priests and laypeople, consists of a three-day weekend focused on prayer, study, and Christian action, and a follow-up program known as the post-cursillo.

Deacons
The diaconate is the first order or grade in ordained ministry. Its origins are in early apostolic times, when deacons preached and baptized under the direction of the presbyters or bishops. Any man who is to be ordained to the priesthood must first be ordained as a transitional deacon. Deacons serve in the ministry of liturgy, of the word, and of charity.

In 1967, Pope Paul VI reinstituted the Permanent Diaconate for men who do not plan to become ordained priests. Although men ordained as permanent deacons are sometimes referred to as "married deacons," the permanent diaconate is open to both married and unmarried men, with the understanding that after ordination, they may not marry even after the death of a spouse. Under the authority of the diocesan bishop, they perform the same functions as the transitional deacons while, at the same time, retaining their roles in society as family and business men.

Dean/Vicar Forane
The title of a priest appointed by the bishop to aid him in administering the parishes in a certain vicinity, called a "deanery," or "vicariates forane." The function of a dean, or vicar forane, involves promotion, coordination, and supervision of the common pastoral activity within the deanery or vicariate.

Defender of the Bond
A member of a diocesan tribunal, either a cleric or a lay person, holding a graduate degree in canon law, who is appointed by the diocesan bishop for cases concerning the nullity of sacred ordination or the nullity or dissolution of the marriage bond. The defender of the bond is responsible for a review of the evidence, scrutiny of the briefs, examination of witnesses, and maintenance of proper procedures during the trial. The defender also deals with some situations concerning the content of the litigation rather than the legal procedures.

Diocesan Consultors
An advisory council of diocesan priests, as appointed by a diocesan bishop, that assists in the administrative affairs of the diocese.

Diocesan Curia
The personnel and offices assisting the diocesan bishop in directing the pastoral activity, administration, and the exercise of judicial power of his diocese. The curia includes among its officers laity and religious as well as clergy. Principal officers of a diocesan curia are the vicar general of the diocese, the chancellor, officials of the diocesan tribunal, examiners, consultors, auditors, the promoter of justice and the defender of the bond.

Diocese
The standard term for a territorial division of the Church, entrusted to a bishop who rules in his own name as local ordinary, and not as a delegate of another. The chief diocese of a province is an archdiocese. It is headed by an archbishop. A diocese is usually limited to a definite territory so that it comprises all the faithful who inhabit that territory. [Cf. cc. 369 and 372, #1] In Eastern-rite churches, the term eparchy is used.

Eastern-rite [Oriental] Church
The term used to describe the Catholic churches which developed in Eastern Europe, Asia, and Africa. The Eastern-rite churches have their own distinctive liturgical and organizational systems. Each is considered equal to the Latin rite within the Church.

Eastern Catholic Association
The eastern catholic association is the association of all Eastern Catholic Bishops in the United States. All Eastern Catholic Bishops, diocesan bishops (and their equivalent in law) and auxiliaries are members. The Association represents the Armenian, Chaldean, Maronite Melikite, Romanian, Ruthenian and Ukrainian Churches. The Syriac, Syro-Malabar and Russian churches are also represented but without a bishop member since they are presently have no established hierarchy in the United States.

Ecumenism/Ecumenical Movement
A movement for spiritual understanding and unity among Christians and their churches. The term is also extended to apply to efforts toward greater understanding and cooperation between Christians and members of other faiths.

Exarch/Exarchy
A church jurisdiction, similar to a diocese, established for Eastern-rite Catholics living outside their native land. The head of an exarchy, usually a bishop, is an exarch.

Hierarchy
In general, the term refers to the ordered body of clergy, divided into bishops, priests, and deacons. In Catholic practice, the term refers to the bishops of the world or of a particular region.

Holy Name Society
A lay organization which seeks to aid its members in living a genuinely Christian life. The society organizes retreats and other spiritual and devotional exercises.

Holy See
The term refers to the diocese of Rome. Used in reference to the governance of the Church, it refers to the Pontiff, the Roman Curia, and the Sacred College.

Legion of Mary
A lay organization established to assist the clergy in the sanctification of its members' souls, and the spread of the Christian faith and spiritual service to others. Members participate in almost every form of social service and Catholic action, including evangelization. The organization was founded in 1921.

Metropolitan
The archbishop of an archdiocese in a province. He has limited supervisory powers and influence over the other dioceses and bishops in the province.

Military Ordinariate [Archdiocese for the Military Services, U.S.A.]
A nonterritorial diocese for American Catholics and their dependents who are in the military or affiliated with the armed forces. Personnel employed by or engaged in diplomatic missions for the U.S. government in countries where U.S. military forces are stationed also belong to the Military Ordinariate.

Mission
A mission, or quasi-parish, is a parish which has not been established because it lacks one or more of the following qualifications: a resident pastor; necessary financial resources; territorial boundaries; or a natural grouping by way of rite, nationality, or language. Missions are attached to some parishes under the care of their pastors.

Moderator of the Curia
A bishop or priest, appointed by the diocesan bishop, who is concerned primarily with administrative matters and with supervising those working in the curia.

Monastery
An autonomous community house of a religious order, which may or may not be a monastic order. The term is used more specifically to refer to a community house of men religious or women religious in which they lead a contemplative life separate from the world.

Monsignor
An honorary ecclesiastical title granted by the Pope to some diocesan priests. In the United States, the title is given to the vicar general of a diocese. In Europe, the title is also given to bishops.

Newman Apostolate
An apostolate to the Catholic college and university community, now commonly known as "campus ministry."

Notary
An elected or appointed ecclesiastical official who acts as a secretary in formal church proceedings. The notary records the minutes, testimony, etc., of the proceedings.

Opus Dei
A personal prelature dedicated to spreading through society an awareness of the call to Christian virtue, awareness, and witness in one's life and work. The organization was founded in 1928 and in 1950, it received Vatican approval as a secular institution. In 1982, it was designated a personal prelature, the Prelature of the Holy Cross and Opus Dei. Members are not members of a religious order, do not take vows, and do not live in community.

Ordinary
Diocesan bishops, religious superiors, and certain other diocesan authorities with jurisdiction over the clergy in a specific geographical area, or the members of a religious order.

Ordination/Ordain

The sacramental rite by which a "sacred order" is conferred (diaconate, priesthood, episcopacy).

Papal Audience

Request for attendance at papal audiences and similar functions may be addressed to: Bishops' Office for United States Visitors to the Vatican. Postal address: North American College, Via dell 'Umilta 30, 00187 Rome, Italy. Tel.: 011-39-06-6900-1821; Fax: 011-39-06-679-1448.

Papal Representatives

There are three types of representatives of the Roman Pontiff:

1) those who represent him to particular churches and civil government;

2) those who represent him to particular churches;

3) those who represent him in international organizations or at various conferences and meetings. [Cf. c. 363; CLSA Comm., p. 302]

1. Apostolic Nuncio

In the United States, the papal representative is sent by the Pope to both the local church and to the government. His title is Apostolic Nuncio.

2. Legate

An individual appointed by the Pope to be his personal representative to a nation, international conference, or local church. The legate may be chosen from the local clergy of a country.

3. Permanent Observer to the United Nations

The Apostolic See maintains permanent legates below the ambassadorial level to several world organizations. Since the papal representative does not enjoy the right to vote within the organization, his title at the United Nations is that of Observer.

Parish

A specific community of the Christian faithful within a diocese, which has its own church building, under the authority of a pastor who is responsible for providing them with ministerial service. Most parishes are formed on a geographic basis, but they may be formed along national or ethnic lines.

Parish Coordinator

A deacon, religious, or lay person who is responsible for the pastoral care of parish. The parish coordinator is in charge of the day-to-day life of the parish in the areas of worship, education, pastoral service and administration.

Pastor

A priest in charge of a parish or congregation. He is responsible for administering the sacraments, instructing the congregation in the doctrine of the Church, and other services to the people of the parish.

Pastoral Associate

A member of the laity who is part of a parish ministry team.

Pastoral Council

A consultative body which the pastor or bishop consults concerning the pastoral activity within the diocese. Its members include laity, religious, and clergy. The pastoral council's purpose is to study practical situations, difficulties and problems, and make concrete recommendations and proposals to the diocesan bishop. The pastoral council is always subject to the final authority of the pastor or bishop.

Patriarch

The Pope is the traditional "Patriarch of the West." All other bishops in the Latin Rite, even those with the honorary title of "Patriarch," are subject to him. Similarly, patriarchs within nations have only an honorary title unless special provisions are made otherwise. Eastern-rite Patriarchs are subject to the Pope while serving as heads of the faithful belonging to their rites throughout the world.

Personal Prelature

In addition to the territorial arrangement of the Church into particular or local churches or dioceses, canon law also provides for non-territorial areas of religious jurisdiction, incorporating secular clergy and deacons. Membership is also open to lay persons. These prelatures are established to meet specific pastoral or missionary needs at the regional, national, or international level without infringing on the rights of the local bishops. A prelature is presided over by a personal prelate, who is an ordinary with the right to establish seminaries and ordain priests as members of the prelature.

Canon law also allows for laity to be associated in the works of prelatures without being withdrawn from the jurisdiction of their own diocesan bishop.

Personal prelatures are jurisdictional structures of a secular type which are established by the Holy See as an instrument within the hierarchical pastoral work of the Church to carry out special pastoral or missionary tasks. Personal prelatures are based on the principle of insertion into the local Church. In this they differ essentially from the personal dioceses, such as those constituted for the faithful of a particular rite, which are based on the principle of independence or autonomy in regard to local Churches.

Vatican II provided for setting up personal prelatures (see Decree, Presbyterorum ordinis, no. 10). Additional norms were established in subsequent pontifical legislation (see Motu proprio Ecclesiae Sanctae no. 1, no. 4, August 6, 1966 and the Apostolic Constitution Regimini Ecclesiae Universae, no. 49, no. 1, Aug. 15, 1967). General legislation concerning personal prelatures is contained in canons 294 to 297 of the 1983 Code of Canon Law.

Personal prelatures are to be established by the Holy See after hearing the views of the respective Episcopal Conferences (can. 294). They are governed by a Prelate according to statutes given by the Holy See. The Prelate is their proper Ordinary, who may incardinate priests and must look after their spiritual and temporal welfare (can. 295). Lay people can dedicate themselves by means of a contractual agreement, to the apostolic activities of the prelature; the statutes are to specify the manner of this organic cooperation (can. 296). And the statutes are also to determine the relations of the prelature with the Ordinaries of the places in which the prelature works, with the prior consent of the Ordinaries (can. 297).

Presbyteral Council

Also known as the priests' council, the presbyteral council is the principal consultative body mandated by the Code of Canon Law to advise the diocesan bishop in matters of pastoral governance. It consists of bishops and priests serving the diocese.

Propagation of the Faith

An organization, headquartered in Rome, which distributes aid to Catholic missions and organizes the work of missionaries all over the world. The organization has responsibility for fostering missionary vocations, assigning missionaries to field work, defining ecclesiastical boundaries and assigning clergy to them, and encouraging training and installation of native-born clergy.

Promoter of Justice

A cleric or lay person, holding a graduate degree in canon law, who is appointed by the diocesan bishop to serve in the role of a "prosecuting attorney" in trials of crimes against church law and of other judicial litigations in the diocese. A promoter of justice may be appointed for a specific case by the bishop.

Province

A defined geographic area containing an archdiocese, or Metropolitan See, and at least one diocese, or Suffragen See. The archbishop of the archdiocese has no direct powers over the Suffragen Sees, but does have limited advisory and appellate authority and obligations. The term also refers to a territorial grouping of particular churches or communities, or a territory of a religious order.

Provincial

The superior of the communities of a religious order that constitute a province.

Provincial Council

An assembly of the bishops of an ecclesiastical province, called by the metropolitan archbishop. The term is also used in reference to the provincial superior of a province, along with his or her chief advisors.

Receptions into the Church

Can take two forms: baptism of those not previously validly baptized, or "reception into full communion" with the Church for those who have already been baptized, in which case a profession of faith affects the reception.

Religious Education Department

The ECA has established the ECDD-The Eastern Conference of Diocesan Directors of Religious Education which oversees, through God With Us Publications, all publications of catechtical materials published by it and used in Eastern Catholic Churches, mainly of Byzantine tradition.

Religious Priest/Diocesan Priest

Religious, or regular, priests are those who are professed members of a religious order or institute. Religious clergy live according to the rule of their respective orders. In pastoral ministry, they are under the jurisdiction of their local bishop, as well as the superiors of their order. Diocesan, or secular, priests are under the direction of their local bishop. They commit to serving their congregations and other institutions.

Retreat

A period of time spent in meditation and religious exercise. Retreats may take various forms, from traditional closed forms, to open retreats, which do not disengage the participants from day-to-day life. Both clergy and lay people of all ages participate in retreats. Houses and centers providing facilities for retreats are retreat houses.

Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults [RCIA]

The liturgical book containing the norms and rituals of the Catholic Church for people who wish to join the Church. Part of the book is intended for baptized Christians who wish to become Catholics. The term is used in a general sense to refer to the process of entering the Catholic Church.

Roman Curia

The official collective name for the administrative agencies and courts, and their officials, who assist the Pope in governing the Church. Members are appointed and granted authority by the Pope.

St. Vincent DePaul Society

Originally known as the Conference of Charity, this is an organization of lay people who serve the poor through spiritual and material works of mercy. The society operates stores, rehabilitation workshops, food centers, shelters, criminal justice and other programs.

Scholastic

A member of a religious order who has completed his novitiate, but has not yet been ordained.

Scholastic Teaching

Usually refers to Scholastic Philosophy, which is the basis for much Catholic Theology. It comes from the canonical "schools" of the 12th-13th centuries, St. Thomas Aquinas, St. Bonaventure, St. Albert the Great, etc., who developed "scholasticism" based mainly on Aristotle. It is the semi-official philosophy of the Church.

Secular Institute

Canonically erected institute of consecrated life for single laity and clerics who strive for the perfection of charity and work for the sanctification of the world while remaining in a lifestyle within the world.

See

The word is taken from the Latin word "sedes" ("seat"), and is used to denote a diocese or ecclesiastical district. The term Holy See is reserved to the diocese of Rome whose bishop is the Pope. U.S. Territorial Sees are dioceses located on territory of the United States of America, but are members of episcopal conferences other than the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops.

Seminary

An educational institution for men preparing for Holy Orders. The term originates from the time of St. Augustine, when those preparing for the priesthood were educated in the "cathedral school." During the Middle Ages, the clergy were educated in a university setting where faculties of philosophy, theology, and canon law existed. Eventually individual dioceses or provinces came to establish their own schools for educating their clerical students. Traditional seminaries date from the Council of Trent in the 16th century.

A school for the spiritual, academic, and pastoral education and formation of priesthood candidates is known as a major seminary in which the focus is on philosophical and theological education. To prepare for entrance into a major seminary, a period of study is set aside for the required courses in the humanities and the sciences in institutions called minor seminaries.

Serra Club

Local units of Serra International, an organization which promotes vocations to the priesthood and religious life, and offers instruction to lay leaders.

Sister

The term, in the strictest sense, refers to women religious who belong to institutes which have professed simple vows. However, in everyday usage, the term is used for any woman religious.

Sodality

A group of laity established for the promotion of Christian life and worship, or some other religious purpose.

Special Centers for Social Services

This would seem to overlap with Specialized Homes. Some of the categorization is fairly arbitrary. Catholic Charities might have its own proper distinctions for government or private funding purposes.

Specialized Homes

Includes such institutions as homes for handicapped (e.g., Misericordia Homes), youth homes (e.g., Maryville, Mercy Boys and Girls, Homes), homes for battered women, drug rehab centers, homes for unwed mothers, etc.

Superior

The head of a religious order or congregation. He or she may be the head of a province, or an individual house.

Synod

A gathering of designated officials and representatives of a church, that has legislative and policy-making powers.

1. Synod of Bishops

The Synod of Bishops is a consultative body, unless explicitly stated otherwise by His Holiness, expressing the communion of the hierarchy. A synod of bishops meets in general assembly, either in "Ordinary" or "Extraordinary" session, when the matter for treatment concerns the whole Church and in "Special Assembly" when the matter deals directly with a definite region or regions.

2. Synod of Oriental Churches

The synods of the Oriental Churches enjoy various prerogatives including the right to elect bishops, regulate discipline and exercise pastoral authority in their respective churches.

3. Diocesan Synod

A diocesan synod is an expression of the communion of the particular church. A diocesan synod enjoys the participation of priests, women and men religious and laypersons; the bishop is the sole legislator.

Territorial Sees

Dioceses located on territory of the United States, but are members of episcopal conferences other than the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops.

Theologate

An institution which provides the last four years of study for candidates for the priesthood.

Titular See

A former diocese which no longer physically or geographically exists. Titular Sees are given as an honorary title to certain bishop not serving as a chief pastor of a diocese, i.e., auxiliary bishops, papal representatives, and bishops of the Roman Curia.

Tribunal

A tribunal (court) is the name given to the person or persons who exercise the Church's judicial powers. By its very nature, this procedure involves the determination of a legal controversy. A major concern of tribunals is conducting the process leading to the dissolution or annulment of marriages. In ecclesiastical matters, definite procedural norms for conducting a trial are found in the Code of Canon Law to settle disputes. There are various grades of tribunals, including diocesan tribunals, the first court of trial for most cases; regional and metropolitan tribunals, located in an archdiocese, the appellate court for all cases tried within the province; and the tribunals of the Holy See, which act as the Church's central appellate court, try cases reserved to the Holy See, deal with questions of procedure and jurisdiction of the other courts, and act as the Church's supreme court.

United States Conference of Catholic Bishops

The United States Conference of Catholic Bishops is a permanent institute composed of Catholic bishops of the United States of America in and through which the bishops exercise in a communal or collegial manner the pastoral mission entrusted to them by the Lord Jesus of sanctification, teaching, and leadership, especially by devising forms and methods of the apostolate suitably adapted to the circumstances of the times. Such exercise is intended to offer appropriate assistance to each bishop in fulfilling his particular ministry in the local Church, to effect a commonality of ministry addressed to the people of the United States of America, and to foster and express communion with the Church in other nations within the Church universal, under the leadership of its chief pastor, The Pope.

Vicar

The appointment of a priest or a bishop as an episcopal vicar is an option given to a diocesan bishop when he needs a deputy for governing a specific territory within the diocese, a group of persons or a specific rite, or a type of apostolic work within the diocese.

By Church law, the diocesan bishop is the judge of all cases in the diocesan tribunal of first trial. He must appoint a priest with ordinary power to judge cases not reserved to the bishop himself. This priest must have a graduate degree in canon law. He is called the judicial vicar, and is sometimes referred to as the chief judge or officialis. He may be given another priest as an assistant with the title of adjutant judicial vicar.

A bishop or priest appointed to participate in the executive (administrative) governance of the diocese with executive jurisdiction as a deputy of the diocesan bishop is a vicar general. The appointment of a vicar general is mandatory for every diocese. This office is designed to facilitate and unify diocesan administration.

Vicar for Religious

A priest appointed by a bishop to act as his representative in dealing with the religious communities in his diocese.

PART I

Hierarchy of the Catholic Church

The Hierarchy, as the supreme governing body of the Catholic Church, consists of the Roman Pontiff, the successor of Peter, and the Bishops joined together with him and never without him (canons 330,331,336) in one apostolic college to provide for the common good of the Church. The Roman Pontiff in the exercise of his office is assisted by the College of Cardinals, and further by the departments also called "dicasteries" of the Roman Curia. The Bishops, of whom some bear the titles of Patriarch and Archbishop, are united with the Roman Pontiff in the governance of the whole Church; the Bishops, when assigned to particular Sees, are individually responsible for the teaching, sanctification and governance of their particular Church. Apostolic Vicars and Prefects together with certain Abbots and other Prelates are also joined in this work.

HIS HOLINESS THE POPE

Bishop of Rome and Vicar of Jesus Christ,
Successor of St. Peter, Prince of the Apostles,
Supreme Pontiff of the Universal Church.
Primate of Italy.
Archbishop and Metropolitan of the Roman Province,
Sovereign of Vatican City State.
Servant of the Servants of God

Francis

JORGE MARIO BERGOGLIO, S.J.

The present successor of St. Peter was born in Buenos Aires on December 17, 1936; ordained for the Jesuits on December 13, 1969; appointed Auxiliary Bishop of Buenos Aires on May 20, 1992, receiving Episcopal consecration on June 27, 1992; appointed Coadjutor Archbishop of Buenos Aires on June 3, 1997 and succeeded Cardinal Antonio Quarracino on February 28, 1998; Created and proclaimed Cardinal by the Blessed John Paul II in the consistory of February 21, 2001. Elected Pope, March 13, 2013; installed March 19, 2013.

VATICAN CITY

Vatican City is the smallest state in the world, occupying 108.7 acres, of which about one third is covered with buildings and is situated on the right side of the Tiber River. Vatican City has territory, population, and sovereignty. This territory, limited as it is, suffices to guarantee the spiritual and temporal independence needed for the exercise of the Holy See's spiritual mission. In 1870 the Kingdom of Italy seized all Vatican possessions which for several centuries had constituted the papal temporal domain. But even after 1870 the Holy See continued to regard itself as a separate entity in international law, and was recognized as such by numerous states with which it retained normal diplomatic relations. After long discussions the Holy See and the then Kingdom of Italy signed the Lateran Pacts on February 11, 1929, so that the complete and independent authority of the Vatican State was and is recognized by the Italian state.

The Sovereign of this small state is His Holiness, the Pope.

The government presently is administered by a Pontifical Commission of which His Eminence Giuseppe Cardinal Bertello is President.

THE COLLEGE OF CARDINALS

The Cardinals constitute a special college and they assist the Roman Pontiff collegially when they are called together to deal with questions of major importance; they do so individually when they assist the Pope especially in the daily care of the universal Church by means of the different offices which they perform (canons 349-350). The Cardinals who are under eighty years of age elect his successor.

The College of Cardinals is divided into three ranks: Cardinal-Bishops, Cardinal-Priests, and Cardinal-Deacons. The College of Cardinals, when complete formerly consisted of 70 members: 6 Cardinal Bishops, 50 Cardinal Priests and 14 Cardinal Deacons, but the late Pontiffs, Pope John XXIII and Pope Paul VI enlarged the College of Cardinals. At the moment the maximum number of Cardinal electors (those under 80 years of age) must not exceed 120.

The Cardinal Bishops (except the Patriarch-Cardinals of the Oriental Rites), have as Titular Sees the Suburban Sees of Rome, which are: Porto Santa Rufina, Albano, Palestrina, Sabina, Frascati, Velletri, Segni. The Cardinal Dean has united to his See the See of Ostia. The Cardinal Priests take their title from the Titular Churches to which they are appointed: the Cardinal Deacons are appointed to other Churches called Deaconries. The first Cardinal Bishop is Dean; the first Cardinal Priest is First Priest; and the first Cardinal Deacon is First Deacon of the Sacred College. The Dean has the right of ordaining the new Pope if he is not already a bishop; the First Deacon has the right of proclaiming him and investing him with the sacred Pallium. On the death of the Pontiff, the Cardinal Camerlengo has the Administration of the affairs of the Holy See.

Sometimes the Roman Pontiff promotes a person to the dignity of Cardinal but does not make public his name and keeps it in pectore. Upon the publication of his name, this Cardinal enjoys his right of precedence from the day on which his name was reserved in pectore by the Pope (cfr. Can. 351¶ 3).

The Roman Curia

The present norms regarding the Roman Curia were publicly announced June 28, 1988, in the Pastor Bonus - Constitutio Apostolica de Romana Curia, and published in A.A.S. LXXX/1988, Commentarium Officiale; pp. 841-934. The Supreme Pontiff usually conducts business of the universal Church by means of the Roman Curia, which fulfills its duty in his name and by his authority for the good and the service of the Churches; it consists of the Secretariat of State or the Papal Secretariat, congregations, tribunals and other institutions, whose structure and competency are defined in special law (can. 360). The Roman curia is the complex of departments and institutes which assist the Roman Pontiff in the exercise of his supreme pastoral function for the good and service of the universal Church and of the particular churches, by which the unity of faith and communion of the people of God is strengthened and the mission is promoted which is proper to the Church in the world.

I. SECRETARIAT OF STATE

The Secretariat of State

The Secretariat of State is the dicastery of the Roman Curia which works most closely with the Supreme Pontiff in the exercise of his universal mission (Pastor Bonus, Art. 39). The Secretariat of State is presided over by a Cardinal who assumes the title of Secretary of State. As the Pope's first Collaborator in the governance of the universal Church, the Cardinal Secretary of State is the one primarily responsible for the diplomatic and political activity of the Holy See, in some circumstances representing the person of the Supreme Pontiff himself.

The Secretariat of State includes two sections, namely: the First Section that is headed by an Archbishop, the Substitute for General Affairs, assisted by a Prelate, the Assessor for General Affairs; and the Second Section of the Secretariat of State headed by an Archbishop, the Secretary for Relations with States, aided by a Prelate, the Under-Secretary for Relations with States, and assisted by Cardinals and Bishops.

Secretary of State: His Eminence Pietro Cardinal Parolin.

Office: Apostolic Palace, 00120 Vatican City State, Europe. Tel: 06-69.88.39.13; Fax: 06-69.88.52.55.

First Section: For General Affairs

In conformity with Arts. 41-44 of Pastor Bonus, the Section for General Affairs or the First Section is responsible for handling matters regarding the everyday service of the Supreme Pontiff, both in caring for the universal Church and in dealing with the dicasteries of the Roman Curia. It attends to the preparation of whatever documents the Holy Father entrusts to it. It enacts the provisions for appointments within the Roman Curia and keeps custody of the Lead Seal and the Fisherman's Ring. It regulates the duties and activity of the Holy See's Representatives, especially in relation to the local Churches. It attends to all that concerns the Embassies accredited to the Holy See. It supervises the Holy See's official communication agencies and is responsible for publishing the "Acta Apostolicae Sedis" and the "Annuario Pontificio".

Substitute: Most Rev. Archbishop Giovanni Angelo Becciu.

Assessor: Rev. Msgr. Peter Bryan Wells.

Office: Apostolic Palace, 00120 Vatican City State, Europe. Tel: 06.69.88.34.38; Fax: 06.69.88.52.41; E-mail: sostituto@sds.va.

Second Section: For Relations with States

On the basis of Arts. 45-47 of Pastor Bonus, the Section for Relations with States or Second Section has the specific duty of attending to matters which involve civil governments. It has responsibility for the Holy See's diplomatic relations with States, including the establishing of Concordats or similar agreements; for the Holy See's presence in international organizations and conferences; in special circumstances, by order of the Supreme Pontiff and in consultation with the competent dicasteries of the Curia, provides for appointments to particular Churches, and for their establishment or modification; in close collaboration with the Congregation for Bishops, it attends to the appointment of Bishops in countries which have entered into treaties or agreements with the Holy See in accordance with the norms of international law.

Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Paul Richard Gallagher.

Undersecretary: Rev. Msgr. Antoine Camilleri.

Office: Apostolic Palace, 00120 Vatican City State, Europe. Tel: 06.69.88.30.14; Fax: 06.69.88.53.64; E-mail: rapportistati@sds.va.

II. CONGREGATIONS

By the name of department (dicasteria) is understood: the congregations, tribunals, councils and offices, namely the Apostolic Camera, the Administration of the Patrimony of the Apostolic See, and the Prefecture of Economic Affairs of the Holy See. The departments are juridically equal among themselves. Attached to the institutes of the Roman Curia are the Prefecture of the Papal Household and the Office of Liturgical Celebrations of the Supreme Pontiff.

The Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith

The proper function of the Congregation on the Doctrine of the Faith is to promote and safeguard the doctrine of faith and morals in the whole Catholic world; therefore, those things belong to it which touch this matter in any way. Fulfilling the function of promoting doctrine, it fosters studies in order that the understanding of the faith might grow and that a response can be prepared under the light of faith for new questions arising from developments in science and human culture. It is a help to bishops, whether individually or gathered in assemblies, in the exercise of the function by which they are constituted authentic teachers and doctors of the faith as well as the office by which they are held to safeguard and promote the integrity of that faith. This Sacred Congregation reproves doctrines opposed to the principles of the faith after the interested Bishops of a region have been heard. It studies the books referred to it and, if necessary, reproves them after the author has been heard and has had an opportunity to defend himself and after the Ordinary has been forewarned. It also examines whatever concerns "the privilege of the faith" whether in law and in fact. It is competent to pass judgment on errors about the faith according to the norms of an ordinary process. It safeguards the dignity of the sacrament of Penance. The Congregation proceeds administratively or judicially according to the nature of the question to be treated.

Prefect: His Eminence Gerhard Ludwig Cardinal Müller.

Secretary: Most Rev. Luis Francisco Ladaria Ferrer, S.J.

Undersecretary: Rev. Msgr. Damiano Marzotto Caotorta.

Office: Piazza del S. Uffizio 11, 00193 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.89.59.11; Fax: 06.69.88.34.09.

The Congregation for the Oriental Churches

This Congregation considers those matters, whether regarding persons or things, which touch on the Eastern Catholic Churches. It treats all questions which pertain either to persons, or to discipline, or to the rites of the Oriental Churches, even if they are mixed in that by the nature of the thing or of persons they involve Latins. Territories in which a major part of the Christians belong to Oriental rites are subject only to this Congregation. Even in Latin territories it carefully supervises the faithful of Oriental rites and provides as much as possible for their spiritual needs even by the establishment of their own hierarchy if the number of faithful and circumstances require this.

Prefect: His Eminence Leonardo Cardinal Sandri.

Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Cyril Vasil, S.J.

Undersecretary: Rev. Lorenzo Lorusso, O.P.

Office: Via della Conciliazione 34, 00193 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.88.42.81; E-mail: cco@orientchurch.va.

The Congregation for Divine Worship and the Discipline of the Sacraments

This congregation does those things which pertain to the Apostolic See as to the moderation and promotion of the sacred liturgy, especially the sacraments, with due regard for the competence of the Congregation on Doctrine of the Faith. It fosters and safeguards the discipline of the sacraments, especially what pertains to their valid and licit celebration; moreover, it concedes favors and dispensations for matters which are not contained in the facilities of diocesan bishops in this line. It alone examines the non-consummation of a marriage and the presence of causes for the granting of a dispensation and everything connected with them. It has competence with regard to the obligations connected with major orders and it examines questions about the validity of sacred ordination.

Prefect: His Eminence Robert Cardinal Sarah.

Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Arthur Roche.

Undersecretaries: Rev. Corrado Maggioni, S.M.M.; Very Rev. Anthony Ward, S.M.

Office: Piazza Pio XII 10, 00193 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.88.40.05; Fax: 06.69.88.34.99; E-mail: cultdiv@ccdds.va.

The Congregation for the Causes of Saints

The Congregation for the Causes of Saints is competent in all matters which in any way pertain to the Beatification of Servants of God or to the Canonization of the Blessed or to the Preservation of Relics.

This Congregation is divided into three offices.

Prefect: His Eminence Angelo Cardinal Amato, S.D.B.

Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Marcello Bartolucci.

Undersecretary: Very Rev. Boguslaw Turek, C.S.M.A.

Office: Piazza Pio XII 10, 00193 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.88.42.47; Fax: 06.69.88.19.35.

The Congregation for Bishops

This congregation examines what pertains to the constitution and provision of particular churches as well as the exercise of the Episcopal function in the Latin Church, except for the competence of the Congregation for the Evangelization of Peoples. It belongs to the Congregation for Bishops to propose to the Roman Pontiff, for approval, the constitution of new dioceses, provinces and regions; to divide, unite and realign them after consulting the interested Episcopal Conferences; it deals also with the erection of the military ordinariates and, after consulting the Episcopal Conference, prelacies for special pastoral ministries for various regions or social groups. This Congregation provides also for the naming of bishops, apostolic administrators, coadjutors and auxiliaries of bishops, military and other vicars and prelates enjoying personal jurisdiction. It is competent for all things that have to do with bishops and publishes norms which, through the Episcopal Conference, provide for the more urgent needs of the faithful.

Prefect: His Eminence Marc Cardinal Ouellet

Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Ilson de Jesus Montanari.

Undersecretary: Rev. Msgr. Udo Breitbach.

Office: Piazza Pio XII 10, 00193 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.88.42.17; Fax: 06.69.88.53.03.

Pontifical Commission for Latin America

(Directly responsible to Congregation for Bishops)

President: His Eminence Marc Cardinal Ouellet.

Secretary: Prof. Guzman Carriquiry

The Congregation for the Evangelization of Peoples or for the Propagation of the Faith

It belongs to this congregation to direct and coordinate throughout the world the work of the evangelization of peoples itself and missionary cooperation, while respecting the competence of the Congregation for Eastern Churches. It is competent for those things which pertain to all the missions established for the spread of the Kingdom of Christ throughout the world, and therefore for whatever is connected with the assignment and transferal of the necessary ministers, for describing ecclesiastical boundaries and proposing those who will govern them. It encourages also the development of an indigenous clergy. The congregation sponsors missionary initiatives and promotes missionary vocations and spirituality. In the territories subject to it, the Congregation has charge of all that pertains to the holding of synods and councils, to the establishing of episcopal conferences and to the review of their statutes and decrees. The Congregation has a Supreme Council for the direction of Pontifical Missionary Works, on which depend the general Councils of the Missionary Union of the Clergy, the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, the Society of St. Peter the Apostle, and the Society of the Holy Childhood.

Prefect: His Eminence Fernando Cardinal Filoni.
Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Savio Hon Tai-Fai, S.D.B.
Adjunct Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Protase Rugambwa.
Undersecretary: Very Rev. Tadeusz Wojda, S.A.C.
Office: Palazzo di Propaganda Fide, Piazza di Spagna 48, 00187 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.87.92.99; Fax: 06.69.88.01.18; E-mail: segreteria@propagandafide.va.

The Congregation for the Clergy

With due regard for the rights of bishops and their conferences, this congregation examines those things which concern priests and deacons of the secular clergy with regard to their persons, pastoral ministry, matters which are in support of the exercise of these things, and in all this provides opportune assistance to the bishops. The Congregation gives practical expression to the concern of the Apostolic See for the formation of those called to Holy Order. It ensures that seminaries be established and directed in accordance with law and provided with a sound human, spiritual, doctrinal and pastoral formation. The Congregation is competent concerning the life, conduct, rights, and obligations of clergy. It advises on a more suitable distribution of priests and fosters the ongoing education of clergy, especially concerning their sanctification and the effective exercise of their pastoral ministry.

The Congregation looks also to the preservation and administration of the temporal goods of the Church without prejudice to the other Congregations which have temporal goods committed to their vigilance.

Prefect: His Eminence Beniamino Cardinal Stella.
Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Celso Morga Iruzubieta.
Undersecretary: Rev. Msgr. Antonio Neri.
Office: Piazza Pio XII 3, 00193 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.88.41.51; Fax: 06.69.88.48.45; E-mail: clero@cclergy.va.

The Congregation for Institutes of Consecrated Life and for Societies of Apostolic Life

The principal function of this congregation is to promote and supervise, in the whole Latin Church, the practices of the evangelical counsels as they are exercised in approved forms of consecrated life and at the same time the activities of societies of apostolic life. The Congregation takes care of Religious Institutes of Consecrated Life and Secular Institutes.

Religious Institutes: the Congregation is entrusted with the affairs of all religious institutes of the Latin Rite and their members. It is also competent in matters which pertain to societies of common life, whose members live like religious, or to Third Orders as such.

Secular Institutes: the Congregation is competent in the same way, all else being equal, for Apostolic Societies which, although not religious, make a true and complete profession of the evangelical counsels in the world.

Prefect: His Eminence João Cardinal Braz de Aviz.
Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Jose Rodriguez Carballo, O.F.M.
Undersecretaries: Rev. Sebastiano Paciolla, O.Cist., Sr. Nicoletta Vittoria Spezzati, A.S.C.
Office: Piazza Pio XII 3, 00193 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.89.25.11; Fax: 06.69.88.45.26.

The Congregation for Catholic Education

This Congregation gives practical expression to the concern of the Apostolic See for the promotion and organization of Catholic education.

The Congregation oversees universities, faculties and any institute of higher learning which has the name "Catholic" in so far as they depend on the authority of the Church, not excluding those directed by religious or the laity.

The Congregation cares for the establishment of parochial and diocesan schools; watches over all Catholic schools below the level of a university and faculty, as well as all institutes of instruction or education dependent on the authority of the Church.

Prefect: His Eminence Giuseppe Cardinal Versaldi.
Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Angelo Vincenzo Zani.
Undersecretary: Very Rev. Friedrich Bechina, F.S.O.
Office: Piazza Pio XII 3, 00193 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.88.41.67; Fax: 06.69.88.41.72.

III. TRIBUNALS

Apostolic Penitentiary

The competence of this Tribunal is concerned with those matters which pertain to the internal forum, for both the sacramental and non-sacramental internal forum. It is competent in matters pertaining to the granting and use of indulgences.

Major Penitentiary: His Eminence Mauro Cardinal Piacenza.
Office: Piazza della Cancelleria 1, 00186 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.88.75.26; Fax: 06.69.8875.57.

Supreme Tribunal of the Apostolic Signatura

This department, in addition to the function which it exercises as Supreme Tribunal, consults that justice may be correctly administered in the Church.

With the many functions, the Apostolic Signatura judges the matters assigned to it in the Code of Canon Law; it prorogues the competence of tribunals; it extends the forum for strangers in Rome to cases of matrimonial nullity in extraordinary circumstances and for grave reasons; it supervises the proper administration of justice; it provides for the establishment of regional and interregional tribunals; it enjoys the rights assigned to it in concordats between the Holy See and the various nations.

The Tribunal settles questions about the exercise of administrative ecclesiastical power which are referred to it. It also passes on conflicts of competence among the departments of the Holy See; it examines administrative matters referred to it by the Congregations of the Roman Curia as well as questions committed to it by the Holy Father.

Prefect: His Eminence Dominique Cardinal Mamberti.
Secretary: Most Rev. Archbishop Frans Daneels, O.Praem.
Office: Piazza della Cancelleria 1, 00186 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.88.75.20; Fax: 06.69.88.75.53.

Tribunal of the Roman Rota

This tribunal acts as a higher instance at the Apostolic See, usually in the grade of appeal, for safeguarding rights in the Church; it fosters the unity of jurisprudence and, through its own sentences, is a help to lower tribunals. It is also a court of first instance for cases specified in the law and for others committed to the Rota by the Roman Pontiff. The greater part of its decisions concern the nullity of marriage. In such cases its competence includes marriages between two Catholics, between a Catholic and non-Catholic, and between two non-Catholic parties whether one or both of the baptized parties belongs to a Latin or Oriental Rite.

Dean: Most Rev. Bishop Pio Vito Pinto.
Office: Piazza della Cancelleria 1, 00186 Rome, Italy. Tel: 06.69.88.75.02; Fax: 06.69.88.75.54.

IV. PONTIFICAL COUNCILS

Pontifical Council for the Laity

This council is competent in those matters which pertain to the Apostolic See in promoting and coordinating the apostolate of the lay persons and, generally, in those things which look to the Christian life of lay persons as such. The norms were published in the apostolic letter, Catholicam Christi Ecclesiam of January 6, 1967 (A.A.S., LIX, pp. 25-28).

The Catholic Church in the United States

The organizational structure of the Catholic Church in the United States consists of 33 Provinces with as many Archdioceses (Metropolitan Sees); 149 Suffragan Sees (Dioceses); The Military Archdiocese; four Eastern-Rite jurisdictions immediately subject to the Holy See in Rome. The Eparchies of St. Maron (Maronites), Newton (Melkites), St. Thomas the Apostle of Detroit (Chaldeans) and St. George Martyr of Canton, Ohio (Romanians), St. Thomas of Chicago of the Syro-Malabarians. Each of these jurisdictions is under the direction of an Archbishop and Bishop called an Ordinary, who has apostolic responsibility and authority for the pastoral service of the people in his care.

The structure includes the territorial episcopal conference known as the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops. In and through this body, which is strictly ecclesiastical and has defined juridical authority, the Bishops exercise their collegiate pastorate over the Church in the entire country.

Related to the USCCB is the civil corporation and operational secretariat through which the Bishops, in cooperation with other members of the Church, act on a wider-than-ecclesiastical scale for the good of the Church and society in the United States.

The following is a list of the thirteen regions in the United States and provinces within those regions.

Region I: Includes the states of Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut. Provinces of Boston and Hartford; Eparchy of Stamford and Eparchy for Melkites.

Region II: Includes the state of New York. Province of New York and Eparchy of St. Maron; Syro-Malankara Catholic Exarchate in USA.

Region III: Includes the states of New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Provinces of Newark and Philadelphia; Archeparchy of Philadelphia, Ukrainian Archeparchy of Pittsburgh, Byzantine Eparchy of Passaic, and Eparchy of Our Lady of Nareg for Armenian Catholics.

Region IV: Includes the states of Delaware, District of Columbia, Maryland, Virgin Islands, Virginia and West Virginia. Provinces of Baltimore, Washington, and the Military Archdiocese.

Region V: Includes the states of Alabama, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee. Provinces of Louisville, Mobile and New Orleans.

Region VI: Includes the states of Michigan and Ohio. Provinces of Cincinnati, Detroit; Eparchy of Parma, Apostolic Exarchate for Chaldeans, and Apostolic Exarchate for Romanians.

Region VII: Includes the states of Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin. Provinces of Chicago, Indianapolis, Milwaukee; Eparchy of St. Nicholas in Chicago-Ukrainian.

Region VIII: Includes the states of Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota. Provinces of St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Region IX: Includes the states of Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska. Provinces of Dubuque, Kansas City in Kansas, Omaha and St. Louis.

Region X: Includes the states of Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas (excluding El Paso). Provinces of Galveston-Houston, Oklahoma City and San Antonio. Personal Ordinariate of the Chair of Saint Peter.

United States Conference of Catholic Bishops

Address—3211 Fourth St., N.E., Washington, DC 20017-1194. Tel: 202-541-3000; Web Site: www.usccb.org.

The United States Conference of Catholic Bishops is a permanent institute composed of Catholic bishops of the United States of America in and through which the bishops exercise in a communal or collegial manner the pastoral mission entrusted to them by the Lord Jesus of sanctification, teaching, and leadership, especially by devising forms and methods of the apostolate suitably adapted to the circumstances of the times. Such exercise is intended to offer appropriate assistance to each bishop in fulfilling his particular ministry in the local Church, to effect a commonality of ministry addressed to the people of the United States of America, and to foster and express communion with the Church in other nations within the Church universal, under the leadership of its chief pastor, the Pope.

Catholic Relief Services

Catholic Relief Services-USCCB
CRS World Headquarters, 228 W. Lexington St. Baltimore, MD 21201-3413. Tel: 866-608-5978 Web: www.crs.org Dr. Carolyn Y. Woo, Pres.

Catholic Relief Services is the official international humanitarian agency of the Catholic community in the United States. CRS alleviates suffering and provides assistance to people in need in nearly 93 countries, without regard to race, religion or nationality.

CRS was founded in 1943 by the bishops of the United States to assist the poor and disadvantaged outside this country — helping people in need for more than 70 years.

CRS is efficient and effective directing more than 92 percent of the agency's expenditures directly to programs that benefit the poor overseas. Our agency touches nearly 100 million lives, by addressing the root causes and effects of poverty, promoting human dignity, and helping to build more just and peaceful societies.

Our relief and development work is accomplished through programs of emergency response, HIV, health, agriculture, education, microfinance and peacebuilding.

We serve Catholics in the United States by inviting them to live out their faith as part of one human family.

Through its annual conference, Stewardship and Development Institutes, publications and audio materials, ICSC allows people committed to Christian stewardship to gather, share ideas, and learn from each other. At one with the universal church, ICSC fosters solidarity of stewardship as a way of life in parishes and dioceses all over the world. Membership in ICSC is extended to several categories of Christian stewards: (Arch)dioceses, parishes, Catholic associations and professional firms from the United States and around the world. Members receive a number of essential benefits to enable them to live stewardship and bring this way of life to others in their communities and organizations.

ICSC encourages the growing professionalism of diocesan stewardship and development procedures and programs, as well as the development of parish-centered stewardship renewal aimed at increasing the time, talent and treasure contributed by parishioners. These principles of stewardship outlined in the 1992 USCCB Pastoral Letter: Stewardship: A Disciple's Response.

The National Association of Pastoral Musicians fosters the art of musical liturgy. The members of NPM serve the Catholic Church in the United States as musicians, clergy, liturgists, and other leaders of prayer. Regular parish membership includes both parish musicians and parish clergy. Individual membership is also available.

NPM programs include an annual national convention for musicians, clergy, and other leaders, as well as institutes for cantors, choir directors, guitarists, and ensemble musicians in addition to programs in pastoral liturgy, chant, music with children, and handbells. Several webinars are held each year on topics of interest and concern to musicians and other liturgical leaders. NPM provides a Job Hotline to assist musicians seeking employment and parishes searching for musicians. The Association also sponsors certification programs for organists, cantors, and professional directors of music ministries.

The Association is directed by a 5-member Board of Directors, advised by a 40-member NPM Council and served by a 9-person staff. There is a division for professional directors of music ministries as well as special interest sections for cantors, choir directors, organists, clergy, ensemble musicians, pianists, composers, diocesan directors of music, music educators, military musicians, campus ministers, youth, pastoral liturgy, chant, and musicians serving African American parishes, Hispanic communities, Asian Pacific communities, and religious congregations.

Publications include Pastoral Music (five times annually); Pastoral Music Notebook (twice monthly by e-mail); Sunday Word for Pastoral Musicians (weekly by e-mail); The Liturgical Singer (four times annually); as well as e-newsletters for clergy and professional directors of music ministries. The NPM website provides a wealth of free resources, including music planning suggestions, access to official church documents, and downloadable recordings of chants for the Mass.

The mission of the National Catholic Conference for Total Stewardship (NCCTS) is to initiate in dioceses and parishes the concept of total stewardship through a pastoral process called Celebrating Life as a Catholic Christian (CLCC). The concept joins the three basic elements of the bible: Evangelization, Discipleship and Service, and through the CLCC process presents them as a single unit not as separate apostolates. The CLCC manual defines the 3 elements, choosing key paragraphs and explanatory excerpts from 20 modern day papal documents. The process first updates active church-going Catholics in sound catechesis and eucharistic spirituality. At the same time the process prepares and motivates them to reach out to lapsed, non-regular church-going Catholics making person-to-person contact with them and with RCIA graduates. They join a Small Ecclesial Faith Community (SEFC) connected to the parish. Active parishoners in SEFCs constitute a welcoming environment for those in need of returning to the faith and those in need of retaining it. In them they experience Catholic fellowship, inter-personal sharing, communal and personal prayer and study official church teachings. Through the CLCC process returnees and recent converts are further formed in doctrine and spirituality for active membership in the Church, for encountering Christ in the sacraments, for enjoying "communion" with all Catholics and for Celebrating Life as Catholic Christians both in vocation and mission.

NCDC leads the Catholic development community toward excellence in the ministry of ethical fundraising through education, resources, networking and advocacy. As the United States' largest association of religious philanthropies, NCDC affirms the mission of each of its members by working for and with them as fundraisers. The hallmark of NCDC is the promotion of the integrity of its member organizations to donors, the media and the general public. To this end, all members are required to fully adhere to the NCDC Code of Stewardship and Ethics and support the Donor Bill of Rights. Central to NCDC's existence are the many services provided to its membership: advocacy, regional seminars, the annual Conference and Exposition, informative publications, educational resources and other specialized services geared to meet member needs.

The USCMA was juridically established September 1, 1981. Its members include U.S. missioners, mission organizations, diocesan mission offices, and others concerned about the mission of the Church and global solidarity. The Association seeks to help missioners to stay up-to-date on mission and world trends, to promote greater global awareness, sensibility, and solidarity in the U.S., and periodically to be a voice for U.S. missioners speaking out in defense of the poor and oppressed throughout the world. USCMA activities include a national conference that highlights specific mission themes and issues, liaison and cooperation with missionary bodies of other Christian churches. The USCMA is responsible for gathering statistical data on the U.S. missionary personnel, which is published biannually.

Publications: quarterly newsletter, Mission Update; reports, U.S. Catholic Missionary Statistics, and education programs on mission and global awareness.

The Beginning Experience ministry offers a copyrighted weekend program to help divorced, separated and widowed persons, as well as their families, work through the trauma of the loss of their spouse and make a new beginning in life. The program was designed by and for Catholics and has its roots in sound Catholic tradition and the sacramental life of the Church. True to the ecumenical spirit in the Church since Vatican II, it has been open to persons of all faiths from the beginning. The Beginning Experience weekend was originated in 1974 by Sr. Josephine Stewart & Jo Lamia in Fort Worth, TX. It has spread throughout the United States as well as other countries. Trained teams make the Beginning Experience weekend available on a regular basis. The ministry also serves as an informational and materials resource for the establishment of support groups to minister to the needs of the divorced, separated and widowed and their families at various points in their growth process.

The National Association for Lay Ministry (NALM) is a professional organization which supports, educates and advocates for lay ministers. The organization also promotes the development of lay ministry in the Catholic Church and provides a national voice for Catholic lay ministry. NALM's membership is drawn from the more than 40,000 lay ecclesial ministers who devote their lives to the Church by working in parishes and dioceses. Other members are students preparing for ministry. Still others live out their baptismal call as generous volunteers to the church. NALM has a long tradition of support from bishops, priests, deacons, publishers and academic institutions. Each, in its own way, collaborates with NALM to promote the empowerment of the laity in the Catholic Church.

NALM recently led the Emerging Models of Pastoral Leadership project. This project was one of the largest research efforts to examine the changing nature of parish life in the United States. In addition, NALM and its partners in the Alliance for the Certification of Lay Ecclesial Ministers, have promulgated and published National Certification Standards for Lay Ecclesial Ministers. In 2012, the Alliance implemented a national certification process for lay ecclesial ministers.

Mailing Lists

Order Direct from the Publisher!

The Official Catholic Directory, published by P.J. Kenedy & Sons since 1817, is your #1 source to reach qualified decision makers at all levels of the Catholic Church, Catholic institutions and organizations in the U.S.

The Official Catholic Directory is the official subordinate listing for verifying the IRS tax-exempt status of U.S. Catholic institutions under the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops Group (USCCB) ruling. As a result, The Official Catholic Directory receives 100% participation in the data updating process, resulting in the most accurate direct response Catholic mailing list on the market.

We are proud to serve the Catholic community in their fundraising efforts, and in promoting pastoral aids, publications, special projects, and other products and services that benefit the Catholic Church.

Square Miles 4,801.

Established a Diocese November 6, 1789; Established an Archdiocese April 8, 1808.

Comprises the City of Baltimore and Allegany, Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Carroll, Frederick, Garrett, Harford, Howard and Washington Counties.

By a Decree of the Sacred Congregation of the Propaganda, July 19, 1858, approved by His Holiness, Pius IX, July 25, 1858, "Prerogative of Place" was conferred on the Archdiocese of Baltimore. By the explicit words of said decree of the Holy See, the Archbishop of Baltimore takes precedence over all Archbishops of the United States (not Cardinals) in Councils, gatherings and meetings of whatever kind of the Hierarchy (in concillis, coetibus et comitiis quibuscumque) regardless of the seniority of other Archbishops in promotion or ordination. Decree signed by Cardinal Barnabo, August 15, 1858.

For legal titles of parishes and archdiocesan institutions, consult the Chancery Office.
